—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 21.

THIS IS WRITTEN on the Rock Island Express from Chicago to the Pacific, "the Golden State." The train just now is crossing the wide Missouri near the Kansas City Union Station.

The Dickey brothers who used to drive cattle to the stockyards here, putting up at the St. James Hotel in lower Main street, and Col. Coates, who ran the Coates House and went from floor to floor warning guests when he saw a cyclone coming down the Missouri, would not recognize or believe in the Kansas City of today.

Skyscrapers are seen from the big railroad station of solid stone, that once was a wooden shed, with the Coates House, five stories high, as the city's architectural monument.

POWERFUL MOTOR buses and electric cars rush up and down the hill from the station to the city. In the good old days, when Col. Nelson, working in his shirt sleeves, in a basement on Delaware avenue, was laying the foundation of a fortune that he gave to his city, the only transportation was Mr. Corrigan's one-mule street car line.

Men of Kansas City, Mo., that wanted to gamble took the mule car to Kansas City, Kan., where faro banks lined the streets. Natives of Kansas City, Kan., that wanted to drink took the mule car to Kansas City, Mo., where there were many picturesque saloons and "the Dutchman" gave you a large slice of roast beef, all the corn and potatoes you wanted and a big glass of beer for 15 cents.

Alcohol was plentiful in Missouri, where gambling was forbidden, and gambling was wide open in Kansas, where alcohol was forbidden.

Mr. Corrigan's mules were the tie that united the two blessings.

THE ROCK ISLAND "Golden State" train runs on an excellent roadbed that gives sound sleep to parts of the United States new to those that use, ordinarily, the Santa Fe, Union Pacific or other north routes.

From Kansas City the "Golden State" turns south, through Kansas, a strip of Oklahoma, across Northern Texas, through the southwest corner of New Mexico, into Texas again at El Paso and along the northern border of old Mexico, through Arizona, changing to the Southern Pacific system in New Mexico.

SUCH A TRIP is made with utmost comfort, thanks to modern transportation and perfect equipment. Work can be done on the train as well as at home and one can think more actively, along new lines.

THE ROCK ISLAND Railroad map of the United States supplies sufficient inspiration, spreading out the great surface of this country before you.

To the right you see the Atlantic Ocean, with Europe and its troubles on the far side. On the North, Canada, and on far to the Northwest, Alaska, another empire.

The Great Lakes, Superior, Michigan, Huron, Erie, Ontario, spread out their blue surfaces, enough fresh water there to supply every acre that needs water, and ship canals from the Middle West to the Atlantic, and from the lake region through the Mississippi Valley, to New Orleans, the Gulf of Mexico, and the Pacific, through Panama.

THIS IS a beautiful country, stretching from one ocean to the other, from the Arctic to the tropics. Within its borders all Americans deal freely with each other, protected by tariff from unjust or undesirable foreign competition.

American statesmen have plenty to do here at home without making their countrymen responsible for the fact that Europe won't stop fighting and Asia won't stop marauding.

On one side of your map are the Great Lakes and great cities New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Washington, Savannah, Jacksonville, Atlanta, Buffalo, Toledo, Detroit. To an Easterner that sounds like "about all of the United States."

That is only one slice along the Atlantic Coast. The bulk of the United States is all to the West.

UNTIL YOU HAVE traveled along the northern line of the United States and down into Florida along the coast across through Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, along the gulf and on through vast Texas, then through Arizona along the Pacific through a thousand miles of California and on through Oregon and Washington to Seattle, you have no idea of this country.

Having seen it, you realize how preposterous it is that those managing such a country should ask England or France:

"How many battleships may we build, please, and what may we do to protect the country that is our own?"

Men are plowing, taking advantage of spring weather in late November. Miles upon miles of cornstalks robbed of their

'BLUEBEARD' ASKS CHANGE OF VENUE

BULLETIN.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 21.—Harry F. Powers, accused "Bluebeard slayer," testifying in his own behalf for a change of venue, declared he had been beaten over a period of 12 hours, as Harrison County officers sought to force a confession from him.

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 21.—Harry F. Powers, bluebeard murder suspect, sat moved today in Harrison County's temporary courtroom while his attorney, J. Ed. Law, outlined in dramatic fashion the flareup of resentment against his client.

Attorney Law is seeking a change of venue for Powers, claiming that a fair trial would be impossible in Harrison County.

Hearing on the petition is being held before Judge John C. Southern.

Powers, without batting an eye, listened to the reading of glaring newspaper headlines submitted by his attorneys as evidence of the feeling here against him.

QUOTES HEADLINES

"Bluebeard Confesses to Killing Four"—"Another Bluebeard Victim Found" and similar phrases, rang out in the crowded courtroom as Law read the papers. Powers, his owlish stare roving over the courtroom, showed no emotion. He was dressed in a dark blue suit, his clean-shaven, mild appearance belying the accusations of five murders—Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, Mrs. Asta Buick Eicher and her three children.

Sheriff W. B. Grimm was the first witness called. He testified to removing Powers from the county jail to the state penitentiary to discourage crowds of curious people, who persistently hung around the jail for a glimpse of the prisoner.

The Sheriff declared that at no time was there any serious threat of trouble or violence to Powers.

DOUBTS FAIR TRIAL

Attorney W. H. Duffy, testifying to his opinion of public sentiment, declared he did not think Powers could be given a fair trial here. On cross-examination by Prosecutor Will Morris, he said a fair, impartial jury might be "possible, but not as probable as in some other community."

Sheriff Grimm, recalled, denied having announced Powers' confession the day after the bodies had been dug up.

Attorney George W. Bland identified booklets containing "Unpublished Love Letters of the Bluebeard;" a sond, "The Murder at Quiet Dell," and a detective story magazine article as having "influenced" public opinion by their circulation in the community.

Rich and poor, high and low, socially prominent and South Side obscure: Mrs. Babcock, wife of the commisioner and prominent in Pittsburgh's highest society circles, leaving the Armstrong home after paying her respects. Outside stood wistful, barefooted Robert Ray, 15, "who heard many nice things about Mr. Armstrong."

BOY MOURNER BAREFOOTED

In a group that watched hundreds pay their respects to County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong at his home, 919 Carson street, last night, was a barefoot boy of 15.

He said he was Robert Ray, of 508 Brownsville avenue. Robert didn't go into the Armstrong home, but mixed with a group that congregated near the house.

Asked why he was without shoes at this time of the year, Robert replied:

"We live in a house owned by my grandmother and pay no rent. I have two younger brothers who go to school because they have shoes. I haven't any and have to stay at home."

THRONGS HONOR ARMSTRONG

Friends, neighbors, political associates and school children were paying homage today at the bier of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong.

Those who went made up the same cosmopolitan group whose members for 35 years have been going there for political conferences; for the settlement of neighborhood disputes; to put in a word for "a fellow who needs a job" or just for informal neighborly visits for which the home was noted.

Until Monday the veteran political leader will lie in state in his modest Carson street home. After that, in deference to the wishes of his associates in public life, he will lie in state in the Courthouse which is linked with so much of his career.

The funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Monday in the rotunda of the building by the

TOKIO FEARS DRIVE BY CHINESE

New Mobilization Reported As Truce Negotiations At League Session Fail

TOKIO, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Authoritative sources here today said reports have been received from Mukden, Manchuria, that 50,000 Chinese troops are concentrating in the vicinity if Chinchow and that this is one reason the Japanese government today rejected as "unthinkable" league proposals for a truce in Manchuria.

Th Mukden reports said the 50,000 Chinese are gathering under the leadership of Gen. Jung Chin, chief of staff for Chang Hsueh-Liang, former Manchurian governor. The news led officials to believe that the Chinese are preparing an attack on the South Manchurian railway and measures are being taken to protect Mukden, the railway and other points.

One of Tokio's chief objections to the truce proposal is that if it were accepted and the hands of the Japanese army tied, Chang Hsueh-Liang, Gen. Mah and others would rush concentration of troops at various points, menacing the Japanese forces, although the concentration would not technically be called fighting.

LEAGUE WORRIED

PARIS, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The League of Nations council decided to hold a public session at 4:30 p. m. today in an effort to iron out a tangled situation which resulted from refusal of Chinese and Japanese governments to approve a Manchurian truce which was

U. S. to Meet British Tariff

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Immediate imposition of countervailing duties to make those the United States charges on importations from Great Britain equal the duties charged on American products by the British will be ordered by the government.

Under the tariff laws, the countervailing duties go into effect automatically whenever the American duties on certain articles are less than charged by a foreign government on the same article.

Treasury and Department of Commerce experts were preparing a list af articles on which the duties would be increased.

Assistant Secretary Lowman, of the Treasury, disclosed the plan this morning.

Seek Lunch Man Missing Two Days

Search for George Seavers, district manager of the Vos Box Lunch Company, 5438 Center avenue, who disappeared Thursday after starting for the bank with $200 for deposit, was continued today.

According to Mrs. Seavers, her husband was warned by an employe of a rival company when he took his present position that "You won't keep your job a month."

THREE FOUND NEAR DEATH AS FUMES FILL ROOM

Leaking Pipe in Basement Blamed; Roomers Alarmed; Discover All Unconscious

Desperate efforts to save the lives of a mother and two daughters, found overcome by carbon monoxide in their home at 5739 Center avenue this morning, were being made at the West Penn Hospital.

Mrs. Mary Breen, 50, and her two daughters, Agnes, 21, and Ruth, 19, were found unconscious in a second floor bedroom by three occupants of another apartment. The latter had not been affected, and it was the absence of the Breens that caused them to investigate.

Mrs. George Wilcox and her daughters, Winifred, 14, and Edna, 12, up since 7:30 o'clock, failed to see the Breens about the house and investigated.

FOUND ON FLOOR

Mrs. Breen was found sprawled on the floor near the bed which her two daughters occupied. She evidently had arisen this morning and walked from her room into a hall and then into the girls' bedroom, which adjoined, when she was overcome.

Mrs. Breen was the first taken to the hospital and a few minutes later Agnes followed her. The condition of Ruth was so serious that physicians and Equitable Gas Company employes used an inhalator on her for some time. She, too, was later taken to the hospital.

While at first it was believed the three were victims of gas, representatives of the gas company explained the trouble. The fumes, they said, escaped from a broken elbow flue connected with a water heater in the basement.

BROKEN FLUE

Due to a split in the hot water line, after the water had passed through the heater, the flame continued high as though a faucet had been opened. Fumes from this high flame escaped through the broken flue and found its way to the upper portion of the rear of the house. This was the explanation of Gorodon Stuart, district superintendent, and James Walsh, inspector for the gas company.

Actress to Marry Oxford Graduate

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The engagement of Mayo Methot, stage and screen actress, to Percy T. Morgon, Jr., of Portland, has been announced by Miss Methot's mother, Mrs. John D. Methot. The two plan to be married in Riverside, Cal., November 27. Morgon is a graduate of Oxford University.

DUKES IN GRID SPOTLIGHT

Eyes of the nation's sport fans were focused on South Bend, Ind., today when undefeated Notre Dame renews its annual football feud with the University of Southern California.

Locally, fans divided their attention between the Duquesne University-North Dakota battle at Forbes Field and the clash between Schenley and South Hills High Schools for the city championship at the Stadium.

Rain which drenched the city shortly before noon promised slippery fields and slim crowds for the local battles.

Snow was predicted for the Irish-Trojan battle, but despite this threat the contest promised to attract a capacity crowd. Football fans from all parts of the country were expected to see the battle.

Other important games listed on the collegiate football schedule find Yale and Harvard clashing at Cambridge before a crowd of 60,000; Iowa opposed to Northwestern, Minnesota playing Michigan, Southern Methodist engaging Navy, Tulane opposed to Sewanee, Georgia Tech paired with Florida, Iowa State playing Nebraska, Temple clashing with Denver, Illinois opposed to Ohio State, Missouri tackling Kansas, California battling Stanford and Texas Christian opposed to Baylor.

RAINS TO BRING COOL WEATHER

Rain tonight and tomorrow will break the balmy November weather which has prevailed for a week, dropping the temperature to around 45 degrees, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted today.

A low pressure area causing heavy rains in the Southwest is headed this way, in competition with a high pressure belt from the Northwest carrying cold and snow. Brotzman favored the southwester to win the race thereby preventing the frigid weather from enveloping this district.

The thermometer registed 68 at the weather bureau this morning, maintaining overnight the unseasonable warmth that yesterday shattered all records for November 20 when the temperature reached 75.

Boy Dies Rescuing Dog From Flames

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Stanley Smith, 16, ran back into his tenement home, swept by fire, to save his dog. He was trapped and died in a jump from the roof. The dog, running across the rooftops, escaped.

'Crime Doesn't Pay,' Says Author Gang Leader

Robert Considine, author and self-admitted criminal, today played a part in a courtroom drama as complex as any bit of fiction he ever wrote.

Fifty years of age and possessor of an international police record, he pleaded guilty in Central Police Court to being the leader of a gang which has committed approximately 100 robberies in the city and county during the past three months.

His hearing was considered important enough that Director of Public Safety James M. Clark and Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk attended.

After Considine had testified he started his career of crime in South Africa when he was 18, Clark, himself an attorney, asked:

"Tell me, does crime pay?"

And Considine answered:

"After all these years I stand before you now with a $1 bill in my pocket, a lot of innocent people under arrest through my escapades and look back on many of the best years of my life spent in prison.

"Crime never paid and it never will."

Considine and Philip Moran, 28, who lived at 6435 Marchand street, the "hideout" of the gang, detectives said, and A. J. Miller, 32, of 1008 Bidwill street, were held for court on 50 charges of larceny.

$40,000 for Jobless, Goal Of Sunday Movie Shows

With indications today pointing to capacity crowds at the more than three score benefit motion picture shows throughout Greater Pittsburgh and Allegheny County tomorrow, 10,000 days' work at $4 a day seemed assured. Between 75,000 and 80,000 people can be accommodated at the gigantic series of benefits, officials said, estimating the total receipts at approximately $40,000.

The benefit performances are being given by the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Allegheny County, sponsored by the three Pittsburgh daily newspapers—the Press, the Post-Gazette and the Sun-Telegraph—and all of the receipts will be donated to the jobless relief fund in Allegheny County. The shows, which are free of expense, represent the motion picture industry's contribution to the nationwide campaign inspired by President Hoover and directed by the Gifford committee. Shows were held at midnight last night instead of Sunday in McKeesport and Wilkinsburg.

Protests against the Sunday night benefit shows have been filed with Director James M. Clark, of the Department of Public Safety, by the Rev. Robert M. Blackwood, of the Western Pennsylvania Sabbath Association, and other ministers.

PINCHOT CALLS PARLEY WITH ASSEMBLYMEN ON RELIEF

GIVES NO HINT OF PROPOSING COMPROMISE

Ways and Means Committee, All Chairmen Will Hear Executive Explain Program

HARRISBURG, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has invited all members of the House Ways and Means Committee to meet in his office Monday at 4:30 p. m. for a discussion of his $120,000,000 unemployment relief program now before the Legislature. This will be followed by a conference with all House committee chairmen at 7:30 p. m.

The conferences were called the Governor said for "conversations about the whole relief question."

SENATE CONSULTED

They will be similar he said to a conference last Monday between members of the Senate and Attorney Gen. William A. Schnader. At that time the Attorney General explained the program to the Senators particularly in regard to the constitutionality of the various bills administration leaders have placed before the Legislature for the Governor.

The first conference will follow a meeting of the Ways and Means Committee scheduled for Monday at 3 p. m. Chairman Sterling of Philadelphia has asked state fiscal officers to present financial reports at that meeting. The committee, after public hearings on the proposed gasoline cigaret and billboard tax bills last Monday decided not to act on the bills until the requested data showed necessity for added taxation.

COMPROMISE HINTED

Announcement of the conferences caused some speculation here on the possibility of the Governor offering a compromise on the relief program to anti-administration leaders who have opposed parts of it.

Heretofore however the Governor has stood strongly by the program he proposed, and only Wednesday Attorney General Schnader strongly defended it in an address before the State Council of Republican Women.

BANDIT ON 'HILL' GETS $3,800

James Kahn, 50, one of the owners of the Greater Pittsburgh Credit Company, 147 Washington street, today told city detectives how he lost $3,200 because he lacked faith in banks.

A month ago, Kahn said, he withdrew $3,200 of his money and placed it in the safe where the company's money was kept.

This morning, a robber dressed in greasy overalls and carrying a dinner pail, entered the store, flashed a revolver and withdrew Kahn's $3,200 from the safe, along with $681.23 of the company's money.

The holdup man, Kahn said, came into the office soon after he had opened for business this morning and introduced himself as "J. Johnson, of 125 Boggs avenue," saying he wished to pay a bill of $2.

He handed Kahn a $5 bill and as the latter opened the safe to get change, the robber jammed a revolver in his back. He said:

"Hand it all over. I know there's a lot of it."

Kahn gave him the $3,881.23 waited until he was out of sight and called police.

Drys' Navy Costume Investigation Asked

BALTIMORE, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Navy officials have been asked to investigate a charge that prohibition agents here were clothed in naval uniforms while obtaining evidence against an alleged speakeasy. The matter was laid before Lieut. Commander Leonard N. Linsley, in charge of naval recruiting here. He was told that a dry agent known as Thomas Bailey and an informer by the name of Jack Harris appeared in a place operated by Louis J. Leisman, in uniform. Leisman was released by United States Commissioner J. Frank Supplee in bail of $1,500.

VOTE MACHINE WINS APPROVAL

HARRISBURG, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The automatic voting machine, at a re-examination here yesterday, was adjudged by the commonwealth's examiners to comply with all of the requirements of the state voting machine act.

The examiners are Jonathan S. Green, Pittsburgh, and J. A. Caldwell and L. N. Gulick, both of Philadelphia.

The examiners said they had taken into consideration all objections raised at yesterday's examination. The test was requested by John W. Glover, Philadelphia, who charged the machine did not permit a voter who had made a mistake in voting to correct the ballot before casting it. He also attacked legality of the machine because he said it could be operated with the rear doors held together by a rubber band, in violation of the state law.

Representatives of the Automatic Voting Machine Company, of Jamestown, N. Y., manufacturer of the machine, said a voter could correct a mistake on the ballot by calling it to the attention of the election officials, and that such a mistake would not occur if instructions were followed.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Secretary of the Commonwealth Richard J. Beamish has notified Cambria County Commissioners that if they do not advertise for bids for voting machines by December 15 he will advertise for bids and award a contract at the expense of the county.

Boise Mayor to Run For Seat in Senate

BOISE, Idaho, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Mayor James P. Pope, of Boise, has announced his candidacy for the United States Senate on the Democratic ticket in the primary elections next May. If nominated he would oppose Senator John Thomas, Republican, whose term expires next year and who is expected to run for re-election.

Fish Company Safe Opened, $100 Taken

Thieves entered the Peck Fish Company, 106-108 Second avenue, during the night, E. E. Peck, the owner, reported to police today, and broke open a small safe and obtained between $75 and $100. Entrance, Peck said, apparently had been obtained through a front window which had been unlocked.

STORMS LASH SOUTH, 7 HURT

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Seven persons were slightly hurt and several thousand dollars property damage was done as tornadic winds lashed sections of Southern Arkansas and a part of Northern Louisiana yesterday.

Rain accompanying the wind in some places assumed the proportions of a cloudburst, as much as four inches falling within a few hours.

The wind destroyed several small buildings and injured Mr. and Mrs. Everett Turbeville and their small daughter, caught in the debris of their farm home.

The storm also swept over the vicinity of Pine Bluff, wrecking or damaging several houses and a store at Reydel. A 9-year-old girl, Opal Williams, who had survived an Illinois storm in which her mother was killed, escaped uninjured when her grandmother's two-story house was lifted from its foundation and moved 25 feet.

FEAR BALLOON LOST IN WILDS

CLEVELAND, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Milford Vanik, 25, missing in an attempt to qualify for a balloon pilot's license, is either floating on Lake Erie or down somewhere in the Canadian wilderness across the lake, attendants at the Cleveland airport said today.

Vanik has not been heard from since he took off in a 35,000 cubic foot gas bag at 8:30 p. m. Thursday. He carried food sufficient for only one day and ballast adequate for only 24 hours aloft.

The pilot probably drifted northeastward over Lake Erie, weather reports indicated. Heavy rainfall early yesterday probably forced him to discard some of his precious ballast. George Hineman, his flying companion since their University of Michigan days, said.

Vanik was prepared for a landing on water, but was ill-equipped for any landing in sparsely settled country. He carried only a case knife, an ax and a flashlight.

Man's Death Held Due to Alcoholism

Edward Rever, of 1513 Lincoln avenue, died last night in the Allegheny General Hospital from acute alcoholism, according to a Coroner's report. Rever was removed to the hospital after he collapsed in front of the building. Two empty bottles which had contained intoxicants were found in the man's pockets, deputies said.

24 DIE IN MINE BLAST, FIRE

LONDON, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Twenty-four men were killed and 29 injured today by an explosion, followed by fire, in one of the pits of the Bentley coal mine near Doncaster, Yorkshire.

The injured men were trapped half a mile beneath the surface.

The fire and the danger of further gas explosions hampered rescue efforts, but firemen and expert rescue crews were endeavoring to reach the entombed men.

There were pitiful scenes at the pithead, as scores of wives, children and other relatives of the victims waited to claim the bodies of the dead, and sought to learn the identity of the other men in the pit.

Butler, Ill, Won't Give Up Speaking

SARASOTA, Fla., Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Although placed under the care of a physician who predicted a nervous breakdown, Gen. Smedley D. Butler, former Marine Corps chief, stubbornly resisted efforts of friends to persuade him not to deliver an address here last night.

PHILA. THRONGS HAIL GRANDI, FOE SEIZED

International News Service.

He arrived here following his conversations in Washington with President Hoover and his New York reception, and was acclaimed by a crowd of 10,000.

Americans of Italian descent should not only be faithful and loyal citizens of the United States, but "the best American citizens," Grandi said at a dinner given him by the Order of Sons of Italy. He declared:

"In no other way could they show their natural affection toward Italy than by giving a constant and vivid example of civic virtues in this country.

"The more they love America, the more they serve America, and the more they will be worthy representatives of the Italian race in the commonwealth."

A close guard was provided for him and his party on his tours through the city. The only untoward incident of the ceremonies, however, was occasioned by Orlando Spartace, whom police seized when he jumped on the running board of Grandi's automobile and shouted:

"Down with Mussolini! Down with Grandi! Down with Facism—murderer of our Italian youth!"

Ideal Secretary Bans 'Dating' With Boss

MISS KATHERINE KRAMER . . . USES POWDER PUFF PROPERLY

DES MOINES, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Dates with the boss are taboo for the ideal secretary, and necking is not condoned—but occasionally there's a "time, a place and a boy."

"She must be efficient, but not a grind.

"An occasional cigaret or cocktail will not ruin a girl's reputation, but there are limits.

"And, even if grandma doesn't like the lipstick and the compact, just remember she was the belle of another day. The skillful use of both will go a long way toward eradicating the ravages of a tough day in the office—the kind of day grandma never experienced."

thought to have been effected yesterday by the council.

Great dissatisfaction prevailed in international quarters over the "misunderstanding" of last night which resulted in an assumption by league authorities that the Chinese had accepted in principle a proposal for a truce and an investigation by an international commission, during which Japanese soldiers would continue to occupy Chinese territory in Manchuria.

At today's session, it was understood, Dr. Alfred Sze, Chinese spokesman, intends to declare publicly that China will never agree to any plan for an "armistice" unless military evacuation is an indispensable condition.

JAPAN'S CONDITIONS

On the other hand, the Japanese government has laid down three conditions under which it will accept a League of Nations investigation of the Manchurian situation. They are:

The inquiry must include China proper as well as Manchuria.

WALL STREET GUARDED

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Wall street resembled an armed camp today, extra squads of police, detectives and other armed guards patroling the financial district where prominent bankers received threats of bombings.

Police Commissioner Mulrooney ordered special night and day squads on duty, when it was learned J. P. Morgan & Co., the New York Stock Exchange officials, the Bankers Trust Company and the Manufacturers Trust Company received menacing letters.

The Department of Justice assigned special agents to the area where plotters boasted they would wreak havoc.

Police said the threatening letters were signed "Communist."

Arctic Wolf Killed By Squirrel Hunter

HARRISBURG, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Antonio Garisto, of this city, went gunning for squirrels and shot an Arctic wolf in self-defense.

The wolf, identified by state Game Commission employes as one of the white Arctic variety, rushed at Garisto while he was hunting two miles north of Camp Hill, a suburb. Dr. Theodore P. Winecoff, of the Game Commission, said the animal had probably escaped from captivity near Coatesville. It weighed 100 pounds and required two shots to stop, Garisto reported.

Discovery on Ship Annoying to Gloria

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Gloria Swanson and her new husband, Michael Farmer, expressed displeasure when they were discovered as "Mr. and Mrs. Martin Foster," aboard the liner President McKinley, which arrived from San Francisco yesterday.

They were whisked away to a Hollywood studio. Friends said the two will resume their journey to New York when the ship sails at noon today.

TOURISTS LAUD SALES TAX AND URGE BEER

See Deficit Cut if Levy Could Be Put on Drinks; Hearst Praised as Host

By ARTHUR HACHTEN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Armed with facts on operations of the sales tax system in Canada, a delegation of Senators and Representatives in Congress returned here last night from a week of investigating in the Dominion.

As guests of William Randolph Hearst, 72 members of Congress went by special train to Montreal, Ottawa and Quebec, gathering facts on the sales tax from the highest public officials as well as from business men who pay the tax directly to the Dominion.

PRAISE CANADA SYSTEM

Several members of the Congressional party returned satisfied the sales tax would go a long way toward wiping out the public treasury's deficit were it applied to beer and wine.

In praising the liquor-dispensing system in operation in Canada, these Congressmen pointed to the large revenues obtained from beer and wine by Canada as an example of what the United States could raise if the Volstead Act were modified to allow beer and wine.

Stepping from the train Senator William H. King (Dem.), of Utah, a member of the Senate Finance Committee, declared the sales tax had proved a success in Canada. He urged Congress consider this form of taxation to help meet the treasury deficit. King said:

"It is obvious that larger revenue must be obtained, or there must be a reduction in federal expenditures far beyond what we may expect Congress to make.

EXPRESS APPRECIATION

"It must be conceded that the sales tax as applied in Canada raises, without exciting any particular opposition from the people, a large amount of revenue."

On the way to the capital a committee selected by the entire group was busy arranging letters and resolutions to thank Mr. Hearst and the Canadian officials and others in the Dominion who made the fact-finding mission a success.

Wagner Urges Beer In Job Aid Program

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—A four-point program for unemployment relief, including legalized sale of beer and wine, was proposed last night by Senator Wagner (Dem.), of New York.

Speaking over a nation-wide radio network, Wagner proposed a large public building program, creation of unemployment reserves, and legislation to provide a national employment exchange system. He said that in addition to providing employment for hundreds of thousands of men, the manufacture and sale of beer would provide at least a quarter of a million dollars of additional revenue in taxation.

Phila. Judge Chides Mabel And Her 'Concentrate'

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Judge Frank Smith criticized California grape concentrate manufacturers and chided their counsel, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former Special Assistant Attorney General, at the trial yesterday of a suit to condemn six cans of the material.

The grape concentrate had been seized by police in the store of Herbert Stein. The court took the case under advisement. Judge Smith said:

"I can't see why the people of California should be favored in this jurisdiction. They wink their eyes at prohibition out there while forcing this same law on the East. These lily-white western states are not going to manufacture a potable drink and retail it in this state, even though they have Mrs. Willebrandt behind them."

Defense counsel contended sale of the concentrate was not a violation of the prohibition law, because purchasers were directed to add one-tenth of 1 per cent of benzoate to destroy fermentation. Judge Smith replied:

"Why doesn't your friend Mrs. Willebrandt put the benzoate in her juice instead of chasing her customers to a drug store to buy it? Anyhow, the majority of the people wouldn't know just how much one-tenth of 1 per cent was."

$90,000 to Idle Man's Wife Speeds Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving was celebrated ahead of schedule in the home of A. D. Morris, unemployed former chemical plant superintendent, Forsythe road, Scott Township, today, as news dispatches brought word from New York that Mrs. Morris had become heir to a fortune estimated at $90,000.

According to report of the New York State Transfer Tax Department, Mrs. Fannie Morris is named beneficiary of one-eighth interest in a residuary estate, appraised at $914,632 left by her cousin, Ansonetta D. Anthony, of Harrison, N. Y. Other cousins were given similar shares while the United Hospital of Rye, N. Y., was given a fourth of the total or about $201,476.

The Morrises came here from New York about two years ago. Some time ago Morris joined the ranks of the unemployed. They have one daughter, 8.

The Morrises were reluctant to discuss their good fortune but indicated their belief that the sum would be much less that that reported.

WELFARE DRIVE, EXTENDED ONE WEEK, LACKS $2,738,000

1,800 COUNTY EMPLOYES TO CONTRIBUTE

13 Banks Have Pledged $141,000; Social Workers Donate More Than Quota

Workers in the joint welfare-emergency campaign to raise $5,981,184 for relief work in Allegheny County this winter will attend luncheons in the William Penn Hotel Monday and Tuesday, when plans for the final week of the campaign will be discussed. As a result of the failure to reach the goal in the allotted period, leaders of the drive announced, the campaign will continue another week.

With $196,174 reported by workers yesterday, the total to date has reached $3,242,725. The remainder sought for 77 agencies and for emergency employment measures is $2,738,459.

COUNTY WORKERS HELP

Eighteen hundred of the 2,600 men and women on the county payroll who receive more than $150 a month are expected to develop a fund of between $35,000 and $40,000, Capt. D. C. Davies announced. With only one-third of the number in, the total is already over $16,000, he said. The solicitation is in charge of Controller Robert G. Woodside and Commissioner Charles C. McGovern.

James C. Chaplin, president of the Colonial Trust Company and of the Pittsburgh Clearing House Association, speaking over Station KDKA last night, made first announcement of the subscription clearing house banks are making. Thirteen banks are subscribing $141,000 on a basis commensurate with their capitalization, he said, continuing:

"There has been much said about the banking situation in Pittsburgh, but I can say that every bank in the clearing house association is giving to the Welfare Fund and Emergency Association. The amount given shows not only the strength of the banks but also their appreciation of the conditions that exist.

"There was no question as to the advisability and necessity for their action. Every bank in Allegheny County has been requested to do likewise, and the clearing house association knows that every one will do its full duty.

MAKES NEW APPEAL

"The finance committee has found that the demand upon the various agencies, owing to unemployment and distress, has gone beyond their budgets and will probably go beyond those of 1932. If the full amount is not raised, many people—deserving men, women and children—will go hungry, cold and not properly clothed.

"Therefore, may I, as chairman of the finance committee of the Welfare Fund, appeal to you to put over 100 per cent the amount set up as necessary?"

Social workers of local agencies have given $11,500, although their quota was only $9,000, it was reported. This is in addition to a 10 per cent pay cut placed in effect sometime ago.

Sewickley's house-to-house canvass has brought in $10,000, of which $4,000 was reported yesterday.

10-Cent Haircut No More, 'War' Ends

SALEM, W. Va., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Salem's barbers ended their price-cutting war last night. During the hostilities one could get a hair cut as low as 10 cents, but now it will be 35 cents again.

2 BOYS TO DROP GIRL ROLES

ANDERSON, Ind., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Two fully grown brothers who said they had been reared from birth as girls, have applied for a judicial decree officially designating them as men.

The brothers, Nola and Geneva Lee Armstrong, filed a petition in Circuit Court asking permission to assume the Christian names of Noel and Gene. In effect, attorneys said, the action asked the court to designate their sex as masculine.

The story was that their mother, who had six sons, longed for a daughter and masqueraded the two boys as girls until her death seven years ago.

Some of the more intimate friends of the family were aware of their dual life, but there were others who actually believed them to be girls. Among the most astonished persons when the secret was revealed was Arthur Call, an Anderson attorney, who filed the petition. He had visited the Armstrong home several times and had always regarded Geneva and Nola as girls. When they called on him dressed as men he did not recognize them until the situation was explained.

DEATH PLOTTER DIES PRAYING

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Tilby Smith, confessed plotter of the murder of his wife, Clara, forfeited his life in the electric chair at Ohio Penitentiary last night. The 26-year-old Ashtabula truckman went to his death at 7 p. m.

Before the current was applied Smith said:

He then prayed for forgiveness for his sins, and to go to Heaven with his other relatives "and my dear wife who I—."

The sentence was cut short as the current struck him.

In his last hours Smith said nothing of Julia Maude Lowther, 23, the West Virginia girl who was the alleged actual killer of Mrs. Smith, on May 29, 1930. Mrs. Lowther is in jail at Wooster awaiting a second trial. At her first trial she was convicted and sentenced to die, but the Appeals Court granted her a new trial and a change of venue from Jefferson to Wooster.

MOONEY'S HOPE REVIVES WITH WALKER ALLY

Labor Leader-Convict Sees New Chance for Pardon With N. Y. Mayor's Help

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—Breaking a rule which he established a year ago, Warden James B. Holohan, of San Quentin prison today permitted a correspondent of Universal Service to see Thomas J. Mooney. Following is the famous prisoner's statement concerning the forthcoming hearing before Gov. Rolph on his application for pardon:

"The news that Mayor James Walker, of New York, is coming to California to personally petition Gov. Rolph for my pardon is certainly cheerful and encouraging. I appreciate it to the utmost.

"I am not permitting myself, however, to entertain undue hope that the prison doors will soon open for me. Too many such hopes in the past have brought me only crushing disappointment, and this time I will hold no undue optimism as to the outcome of the hearing. If freedom comes it will come.

"Nevertheless, I believe that the atmosphere is clearing and that the feeling at Sacramento and throughout the country is more friendly than it ever has been in the past. Even the children of the nation have learned something about the Mooney-Billings case and know that our conviction and imprisonment was a flouting of justice.

"My case is now definitely separated from that of Warren Billings, and there is no reason to suppose that we change this status. I am proceeding in my way and Billings in his, toward the release which we both hope will come."

Green Cab Stolen, Wrecked and Burned

While the driver of a Green cab was answering a call at Twenty-second and Carson street, early today, two men stole his machine and drove it to the foot of Mountain street, St. Clair Borough, where they forced it over an embankment. The cab caught fire and was destroyed.

A short time before Walter Peterson, 23, of 356 North Craig street, driver of a Yellow cab, reported to police that a fare he picked up at Fifth avenue and Grant street, held him up in McNeilly avenue, Dormont, robbing him of $6.

Thieves Loot Home And Parked Auto

Thieves with a pass key entered the home of D. Cohen, 5530 Raleigh street, and escaped with a watch valued at $45 and $5 in cash, according to a police report.

Mildred Buckley, of 518 South Main street, reported to police that thieves broke into her automobile parked at Fifth and Liberty avenues and stole wearing apparel valued at $15.

'30-DRINK' MAN WINS $5,000 CHECK SUIT

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Gordon C. Thorne, the millionaire who deposed that he could imbibe 30 drinks in the course of an evening and still "stand up," was today absolved of the necessity of honoring his $5,000 check issued in Paris six years ago to the late William K. Ziegfeld.

Thorne's testimony that he had assimilated just a few more than the measured 30 drinks of assorted liquors on the night he signed the check and therefore could not be held responsible for its payment was upheld by a Superior Court jury. In returning a verdict against a suit to collect on the check, the jury ruled that even if Thorne had been sober on the night the check was drawn, he received no consideration and consequently was not liable.

Thorne, a former resident of Chicago, forwarded his deposition from his present home in California. In the document he said he stopped payment on the check because he had received no profits from a roof garden in Paris for the purchase of which he had issued the check and also because he had exceeded his nightly quota of drinks when he signed the paper.

In explaining his drinking capacity, Thorne testified:

"I was a stiff drinker, but I usually knew where I was. That is, I knew generally whether I was drinking in Deauville or Paris or England — general things like that. But mostly I just attended to my drinking and kept pretty well primed without bothering about the unimportant detatils."

He added that he is:

"On the wagon now."

The unsuccessful suit to collect on the disputed check was brought on behalf of the late Ziegfeld's estate by Julian Thomas, an American lawyer who lives in Paris.

Confesses Murder, Burning of Body

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Arrested in connection with investigation of the mysterious disappearance of two men, Gilbert Francis Collie confessed he had murdered one of the men, George Walker, of Santa Rosa, and had burned his body in a cabin in Carbon Canyon near Santa Ana, Thursday night, police announced. The body was found.

Collie confessed, according to police, that he killed Walker to obtain his automobile and money and personal effects.

Pennington's Men Dig Up Beer Pipe

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 21.—(INS.)—An underground pipe, believed used to convey beer, caused a raid on the Hensler brewery here by prohibition enforcement agents under the direction of Administrator John D. Pennington.

After digging 22 days at a cost of $1,375, the agents found the four-inch pipe buried 11 feet under the ground and leading from the brewery to a nearby beer drop.

CAROL IN TRUCE OVER WEDDING

VIENNA, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—A truce between King Carol, of Rumania, and his brother, Nicholas, in regard to the latter's marriage to a commoner was reliably reported from Bucharest last night.

The mediator was identified as Prince Friedrich Hohenzollern, brother of the late King Ferdinand and uncle of the two men.

King Carol was said to have sent a message by Prince Friedrich saying that he did not object to Prince Nicholas maintaining friendly relations with Mme. Deletji, his morganatic bride, but that he must not attempt to validate the marriage in a religious ceremony. He must not receive any official visits in her house or be seen publicly with her.

OLD ARMSTRONG FRIEND MOURNS

A friend of County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong for more than 40 years, from the time they worked in a South Side glass plant, today paid his final tribute to the dead political leader. Dr. Willison H. McCombs, with offices at 26 South Fourteenth street, who has practiced medicine on the South Side 30 years, said:

"Joe Armstrong was always genial and pleasant, a man with a contagious smile, throughout the years I knew him. A friend like him will never be found again."

Dr. McCombs worked as a glass-blower's helper, assisting his brother in the plant of the Howards Window Glass Company, in South Twenty-second street, where the Independent Brewing Company now stands. The glass-blower next to his brother was Armstrong. There the friendship originated.

Family Abandons Private Services on Pleas of Dead Chief's Associates

Rev. Carl A. Voss, pastor of the German Evangelical Protestant Church, Smithfield street, a lifelong friend of Commissioner Armstrong, who will also conduct the services at the grave in South Side Cemetery.

Burial will be made in the same plot in the South Side Cemetery where Commissioner Armstrong's first wife, his father, mother, two brothers and a sister lie buried.

Commissioner Armstrong's body will lie in state in the Courthouse rotunda from 9 a. m. until 2 p. m. Monday. The family and city and county officials will attend the services.

It had been planned to hold the rites at the family home but these plans were changed last night.

DAVIS TO ATTEND

United States Senator James J. Davis was expected to arrive today to attend the funeral and the Moose Lodge services to be held tonight at the Armstrong home. Senator Davis is director general of the Moose, of which Commissioner Armstrong was a past grand dictator.

The Masonic bodies of which Commissioner Armstrong was a member will hold services Sunday afternoon at the home and B. P. O. E. Lodge No. 11 will hold services there Sunday night.

Only once before has a body lain in state in the Courthouse. Shortly after it was built in the early 90's the body of Robert Mercer, who was also chairman of the Board of County Commissioners and who died in office, was thus honored.

THRONGS VIEW BODY

Until midnight a throng of his friends and acquaintances passed by his bed, paying their respects to the man who fought his way from the glasshouses to the top in local politics and then lost two hard-fought campaigns, one in politics and the other against death.

They came from all walks of life. Men in working clothes rubbed shoulders with judges and other high public officials. Led by their principal, 600 pupils of Bedford Public School, most of them children from the neighborhood, were the first to pass the bier after the Armstrong family viewed the body.

DISCUSS ACHIEVEMENTS

It was an unusual night, balmy spring-like weather. And it was an unusual crowd paying tribute to the memory of an unusual man.

In life Commissioner Armstrong was a virile, battling leader of hard-fought, bitter political campaigns. As the shrewd mainspring of the Board of County Commissioners he directed the expenditure of more money than any Board of Commissioners ever spent.

In death, his wasted frame clothed in a plain black suit, his ruddy color gone, and his keen blue-gray eyes, that could flash kindly at a friend and bore clear through an enemy, closed forever, he is just plain Joe Armstrong, idol of his "boys and girls" and wholesomely respected by his bitterest political foes.

On the sidewalk small groups of his former associates and employes gathered to gossip. It was a night for loafing in the open air. Some speculated on what might have happened if the hookups had been different in the last campaign. Others talked about the good old days when harmony ruled in the ranks of the G. O. P. and Armstrong was undisputed political boss of the county.

This will be the first of a series of instruction periods of the Young People's division. The program will be under the direction of Miss Cora B. Dickey, Young People's County superintendent.

Assumption Parish Plans Services of Thanksgiving

By PENELOPE REDD

The new Roman Catholic Church of the Assumption, North Sprague avenue, Bellevue, will be dedicated tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. by the Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese.

The dedication will be followed by a solemn high mass, at which the Rev. I. J. McGovern, pastor, will officiate.

The ceremonies will be resumed at the evening service. "Memorial Day" and "The Day of Thanksgiving" will be celebrated Monday and Tuesday.

Many clergymen from the Pittsburgh district will take part in the services. Special programs of music will be rendered by the boys' choir, under the direction of Charles P. Schwan.

The new church was designed by Comes & McMullen, architects distinguished by ecclesiastical structures throughout the United States.

BUILT OF LIMESTONE

The edifice, which is of Romanesque style of architecture as found in South France, is constructed of limestone set in alternating regular and broken courses to give variety to the surface of the building. The details of decorative appeal are concentrated chiefly in the main entrance, on the North Sprague avenue facade.

A monumental arch, characteristic of the Romanesque, springs up between two octagonal towers, to be crowned with a gable. Of immediate interest in this entrance is the rich, sculptured tympanum directly above the door. Frank Aretz has depicted the triumphant "Assumption of the Blessed Virgin" in the company of angels. The arch also incloses a window with stone traceries which terminate in four heroic sculptured figures representing Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.

Other sculpture used to embellish the structure includes the figure of Adam and Eve used as capitals to support the great arch and the "Lamb of God" as the keystone of the same member. Gargoyles on the turrets and grotesque heads which support the stone cornices of the walls and also the apse at the far end of the church, complete the decorative embellishments of the exterior.

BALANCE PRESERVED

The masses of the building, with unobtrusive fenestration, are well distributed in balance. The rather formal texture of the limestone is not only relieved by the sculptures, but by the lead-covered towers, and the particolored tiles of the roof. The interior, as one enters the narthex or principal vestibule, has a color ensemble created by warm-hued Kasota stone, a beamed oak ceiling, and a floor set in many-colored tiles.

The church proper, which seats about 1,000, has 14 limestone columns with carved capitals which carry the weight of the clerestory walls enclosing the nave of the church. The interior will eventually be furnished with an appropriately designed altar, mural paintings, and other refinements which will mitigate the present rather austere splendor inherent in the structure alone.

The architects have designed a building impressively restrained and dignified. Remote from any period of architecture used for commercial purposes, it embodies a genuinely religious atmosphere.

Soloist

CHRISTINE MILLER CLEMSON

Mrs. Clemson, guest soloist at vespers tomorrow at 5 p. m. in Shadyside Presbyterian Church. The services will be broadcast over KDKA and the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, pastor, will preach.

SACRED MUSIC, GIFTS TO MARK EVENT

Thank-Offerings Planned By Many Congregations; Special Programs Listed

Thanksgiving will be observed tomorrow in many churches of the Pittsburgh district. Thank-offering services, conducted by missionary societies, have been scheduled in several churches, and in many more the sermon subjects will deal with the Thanksgiving theme.

Ceremonies of a festive character will be held tomorrow in Epiphany Catholic Church, Washington place. Solemn high mass will be celebrated at 11 a. m., with the junior and senior choirs singing Lorenzo Perosi's "Missa Pontificalis," under the direction of John Sedlacek. The service will be in charge of the Rev. L. A. O'Connell.

THANK OFFERING

Children of the Sabbath school of the Seventh United Presbyterian Church, Forty-fourth street, will don native costumes of India tomorrow morning to take part in the annual thank-offering service of the missionary societies of the church. Mrs. R. E. Ayers, a missionary in India for 18 years, will speak. The costumes which the children will wear at the service were brought from India by Mrs. Ayers.

A homecoming service for Class No. 17, of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Sunday School, Warrington avenue, will be held tomorrow night. The class, composed of young men, was organized 20 years ago. At its annual homecoming service the Rev. R. B. Callahan will speak on "Sacred Memories."

SACRED CONCERT

A sacred concert will be presented tomorrow night by the choir of the Spencer Methodist Episcopal Church, Spencer and Churchview avenues. At the morning service the Rev. Dr. Paul Weyand will speak on "Faith's Alternative, or the Stand on Convictions of the Three Young Hebrews in the Court of Nebuchadnezzar."

A sermon dealing with the motives for gratitude will be presented tomorrow morning by the Rev. Dr. M. B. Fuller, of Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, North Highland avenue and Rippey street. At the evening service Dr. Fuller will speak on "Jesus Was Forgiving. Are We?"

"The Pilgrims" will be the subject of the Thanksgiving service to be held tomorrow morning in the First Presbyterian Church, of Ingram, of which the Rev. Dr. Charles C. Cribbs is pastor. At the evening service the Rev. Dr. E. R. Davidson, of the First United Presbyterian Church, of Ingram, will speak.

Other services of a Thanksgiving nature will be held tomorrow. Many churches have also announced programs for Thanksgiving morning.

Dr. Roy E. Sleppy, Library road, Bethel Township, left his $10,000 estate to his sister, Kathryn F. Sleppy. Mrs. Ella V. McMichael, Carnegie, left her $10,000 estate to four children.

PHILA. TO ASK STATE AID

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21 — (AP.) — A three-point "Philadelphia relief program" to be presented to the special session of the Legislature next week has been announced by the Philadelphia delegation, with Mayor-Elect J. Hampton Moore as spokesman.

The program calls for: Appropriations for sewers and other work to remove pollution of the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers; improvement of county roads with state funds; state aid for the improvement of state highways, including Roosevelt boulevard.

Moore announced his willingness to appear before legislative committees in behalf of the program if necessary.

The Philadelphia legislators expressed the belief there are ample legal grounds for inclusion of their program in the scope of the special session.

HUSBAND SUED FOR SUPPORT

Seeking an order for a reconveyance of property to her husband, Joseph R. Marmarese, and restraining him from withdrawing $20,000 deposited in the Highland National Bank, Mrs. Edna Helen Marmarese, of the East End, filed an equity action in Common Pleas Court.

She alleged East End property was conveyed to his uncle, Anthony Raymond, Sr., without consideration, and she was induced to join in the deed to preclude her dower interest.

They were married in Hollidaysburg in February, 1929, and separated September 1 last, and she is in ill health and unable to pursue her profession as a nurse, she averred. She asked an allowance for support and said Marmarese has Pittsburgh property worth $50,000. He has been living in Florida, she said.

"You needn't tell me —I know Camel is the fresh cigarette!"

Milder because they're fresh

CAMELS are never parched or toasted!

FOLKS who smoke really fresh cigarettes made from choice sun-ripened tobaccos never have to give a thought to their throats.

Camels are the fresh cigarette—everyone knows that now—they're blended from the finest Turkish and mild Domestic tobaccos that money and skill can buy

We would never dream of parching or toasting these choice sun-ripened tobaccos—that would only drive off or destroy the natural moisture that makes Camels fresh in nature's own mild way.

The Camel Humidor Pack protects a fine cigarette fresh with natural moisture—it could do little or nothing to freshen a cigarette that is dried-out or factory-stale.

If you smoke for pleasure, see for yourself what freshness means in mildness and flavor—switch to Camels for just one day—then leave them, if you can!

Patricia Post

There was a wedding in the East Thursday of interest to members of Pittsburgh society, and a Pittsburgh man, William H. Brown, was one of the ushers.

The bride was Jane Trowbridge Ely, daughter of the Carl B. Elys, of Greenwich, Conn., and the bridegroom Charles Minot Dole, of New York.

They were married in St. Bede's Chapel, Rosemary Hall, Greenwich, by the Rev. William B. Lusk, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Ridgefield, a friend of the Ely family.

The bride attended fashionable Miss Porter's School where so many of our debutantes study, and the bridegroom is a graduate of Yale, '23.

The William Perry McCormicks, of Division street, Sewickley, announce the marriage of their daughter, Marie Craig McCormick, to George Huntleigh Duell, of Kittanning, which was solemnized on Wednesday in Pittsburgh. After November 27, they will be at home in the Nixon Hotel, Butler.

* * *

I want to remind you of the tea to be given tomorrow afternoon in Kingsley House by the men's and women's board of the Kingsley Association, in honor of Mrs. Charles Cooper, the new head of the association and the other members. In the receiving line will be James L. Stuart, president; H. Z. Mason and Mrs. William Frick III. Pouring will be Mrs. James L. Stuart, Mrs. Herbert DuPuy, Mrs. Walter Fundenberg and Mrs. Frederick Ickes Merrick.

The Art Society presented Elisabeth Schumann in a lieder program last night in Carnegie Music Hall, the first of its kind since the days of Gerhardt and Culp. Such an abundance of excellent music of an evening comes almost as a shock and it is gratifying to learn that there are singers who still have enough faith in the good taste of their audiences to sing these songs.

Mr. Lissfelt

As in the case of our former idols in this field of music, one can find easily discovered technical frailties in Schumann's voice, defects which may be laid to various causes. But her voice, though small, has lent its beautiful lyric quality to many a gay operatic scene, and is especially well adapted to the singing of those exquisite miniatures which she chose to give us last night.

As a musician she can easily rank with the best. We may easily take exception to the tempo of her Brahms "Wiegenlied" and Schubert's "Die Post," but no one can deny the swift appeal of her winsome humor in Bach's "Patron," Mozart's "Meine Wuensche," or in the songs of Mahler and Strauss.

It took some time for the audience to become attuned to the singer's style but it did find that she had a great deal more to give than the flourish of more sensational sopranos and was willing to remain and ask for more. Among the encores were "Serenade" and "Morgen" of Strauss. Carl Alwin is a very appreciative musician, but he played staccato and not too sympathetic accompaniments.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Jeanne Marie Glasso Weds Anthony F. Cost

Miss Jeanne Marie Glasso daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Glasso, of Turtle Creek, became the bride of Anthony F. Cost, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cost, of Forest Hills, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in St. Coleman's Church, Turtle Creek.

The bride wore white satin and a veil of tulle, and carried white roses and calla lilies. Her sister, Miss Catherine Glasso as maid of honor, wore opalescent pink transparent velvet.

Miss Eva de Muzzio, Miss Carmen Hall, Miss Rose Regerrio and Miss Rose Cost, sister of the bridegroom, who were bridesmaids, were in pastel shades of satin, and carried pink roses. Rose Shawner and Jacqueline Civilett were flower girls, and Edward McGinty was ringbearer.

Serving as best man was Charles Cost, brother of the bridegroom. A wedding dinner in the Glasso home followed. A reception was held at which 500 guests were present. After an Eastern honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Cost will be at home in Lenox avenue, Forest Hills.

Ad Writing of Women Praised at Luncheon

In New York 12 out of 27 department and specialty stores have women advertising managers, Thorndyke Deland, head of the Executive Placement Bureau, told the Women's Ad Club at the luncheon in Kaufmann's yesterday. The speaker quoted the heads of several department stores to the effect that women write better advertising copy than men, as their sense of fashion is much keener and they follow instructions more readily. Even in cases where men were acknowledged to be the better ad writers, women assistants were suggested. More than 50 per cent of the women holding such positons are college trained and many are married, Mr. Deland said.

Crafton Group Gives Program for Congress

A good-sized audience heard the program presented yesterday by the literature department of the Crafton Woman's Club for the same department of the Congress of Clubs. First there was a number of Ruth Stephens Porter's compositions sung by Mrs. Carl Hespenheide, with Mrs. Porter accompanying. Then came a reading of Barrie's "The Five-Pound Look," by Miss Kate Ford, and, in completion of the visiting club's part of the program, a compact review of Norman Thomas' "America's Way Out," which Mrs. J. Gordon Ogden presented.

In addition to this, Mrs. Mae T. Neff, chairman of the hostess department, presented James Gabelle, Paterson (N. J.) editor, columnist, traveler and poet, who spoke on "Ideals," and reminisced a little about his acquaintance with Oscar Wilde, when he (the speaker) was a student at Oxford. Later, in a conversation shortly before his death in Paris, Wilde prophesied that the greatest geniuses in stage, poetry and prose writing would come from America.

FROCKS OF VIVID COLORS TO BE SEEN THIS SEASON

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—We can take our vivid colors neat or temper them with a dash of softness. But we should take color and plenty of it, whether tempered or not, for it gives the cheerful note that is so much wanted just now.

* * *

COLOR IS RAMPANT this season and women who always stuck to black, dark brown or blue, are just revelling in the opportunity of wearing brilliant tones, reds and purples. A word of caution, though. Please watch your make-up very carefully and see that your rouge and lipstick blend with the hue of the frock, otherwise the result will be unkind to both you and your costume. But the right tones in the make-up will enhance the frock and your charming self. Almost anything can be worn by anybody, provided that an unbiased and careful study is made of the whole ensemble.

* * *

GO SLOWLY, experiment carefully and then fare forth a new and lovely person, presenting a delightful picture. And please remember that this result is not a matter of money, but of good taste and that so important dress sense.

* * *

THE SKETCHES shown today are of very cheerful frocks. The first is in a brilliant purple with a vivid reddish tone. Nearly every collection is showing one or two such models this season. Mme. Lanvin has used this tone in thin wool crepe for the dress named "Bishop" in honor of its side sleeves formed of spreading panels set edge to edge and rounded, each one at top and bottom. These are bloused into a close-fitting lower sleeve just below the elbow. The bodice fashions in front with a double-breasted effect achieved by four large silver buttons. The belt is of metal mesh in silver. The skirt is long and has a circular flare.

* * *

THE AFTERNOON DRESS by Lucile is in a lovely deep garnet red in ribbed velvet on chiffon. The waistline is rather high and is placed on a stiff inner belting such as was the conventional skirt top in those almost mythical years just preceding the Great War. The bolero has a dainty finish in the ivory tinted georgette and real lace collar which tempers the red of the frock. The collar extends down to the waistline in front and ties there in a small bow. A slight puff, tucked at the top, marks the sleeve of this season's vintage. Two wide bands set horizontally in the ample skirt.

Every Traveling Actor From Hollywood Thinks He's A Burton Holmes

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1931, by Press Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 21.

Whenever a star goes traveling these days, he takes a camera with him. If he's lucky, he comes back without enough film to pay his expenses.

As usual Doug Fairbanks goes the other fellow one better. His "Around the World in Eighty Minutes" will bring in returns comparable to one of his feature pictures and now he's off to the Gobi desert and Africa with Lewis Milestone and Robert Benchley.

Doug Fairbanks

Zane Grey has made a picture of his sword-fishing trip.

Latest Hollywood celebrity to go adventuring with a camera and a portable sound equipment is Roland West, the director. Roland's yacht is now headed for the Cocos Islands, famous as a pelican refuge. His party includes four Hollywood actors, one of whom Roland sent to cooking school for two months before the expedition started. They hope to return with material for a short subject at least.

I don't believe it's been told that Mary Pickford was really responsible for Doug's "Around the World in Eighty Minutes." He was intending just to take a pleasure trip to the Orient, but practical Mary suggested a camera and sound equipment be included in the baggage.

IT DIDN'T QUALIFY

One of the bootblacks at M. G. M. was arguing today about an English farthing someone had given him.

"What is this?" he asked a passing executive.

"It's a farthing," was the reply.

"Yeah," said the bootblack. "Well, how do you tell?"

"Why, it's got a picture of King George on it," explained the executive.

WET PARADE

While things are still a little indefinite, I understand Walter Huston and Lewis Stone have been selected to play in "The Wet Parade," Upton Sinclair's sensational novel that will reach the screen under M. G. M.'s banner. Efforts also are being made to secure Helen Hayes for this picture. Victor Fleming will direct.

IN THE NEWS

The next thing John Boles will do under his new Fox contract will be "Scot's Valley," from the novel by Mildred Cram.

This story has a western locale and that's about all I know about it.

'Ruling Voice' Midnight Show in Warner

"The Ruling Voice" will be the midnight attraction in the Warner Sunday. "Local Boy Makes Good" was to have been the attraction, but because of a switch in the benefit shows for the unemployed Sunday evening "The Ruling Voice" was substituted.

Merchant Held As Cattle Thief

ERIE, Pa., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Ted Wilkinson, 34, of Erie, was arrested last night by state police on a charge of stealing cattle. He was bound over to court and released under $2,000 bond.

Police said Wilkinson's method was to buy a heifer from a farmer and on leaving the place to tie up another heifer in the pasture. At night he would return and steal or kill the second heifer, the officers related. Arresting officers said Wilkinson sold the meat of the stolen heifers in a store he operates here.

California Sunday Benefit Cancelled

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 21.—A protest from the California Ministerial Association caused the cancellation of benefit movies scheduled in two theaters there tomorrow.

Some More War In Davis

By CLARENCE E GRUNDISH

"Heartbreak" is the new picture in the Davis. It is a sentimental war romance. It is a mixture of "Wings" and the traditional movie closeups.

Charles Farrel is the hero. He has a new leading lady this time. She is Madge Evans.

Mr. Farrell and his new leading lady are very much in love. But the war separates them. She is an Austrian countess. He is an American.

They stand watching their reflections in a fountain pool. It is farewell time. She says, "I'll watch for you in the fountain every day."

So audiences know what to expect at fadeout time.

The movie-makers sneak in some of that "irony of war." Our hero goes in pursuit of a lone enemy aviator. The enemy is shot down after a lot of zig-zagging about mountain peaks. The hero discovers the man he killed is his friend and his sweetheart's brother.

Yell Contest Winners Are Announced

Plays, Players and By-Play

—By WILLIAM J. LEWIS—

Whatcha got to be thankful for? Harry Brown suggests "Three's a Crowd," holiday week attraction in the Nix. It opens Monday with Fred Allen, Clifton Webb and Libby Holman as stars. Three matinays, Wed., Thu. and Sat. will account for the afternoons.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

SOME DAY, if I ever get the time, I would like to do a magazine piece on the plagiarism angles of show business. Although the average man knows nothing about this situation—and probably wouldn't care much if he did know—it strikes me as a most amazing sidelight on the amusement game. The sums that are collected each year by phony authors from legitimate concerns are little short of fantastic.

Take, for instance, the song writing game. What's that? You don't want it? Well, I can't blame you particularly, but let's consider it for a moment anyhow. Let's peer into the offices of a publishing house that has a new hit song by the name of, for example, "Carolina Sunshine."

A summons has just been served on Moe Ginsberg, president of the outfit. A Vermont letter carrier claims that the writer submitted "Caroline Sunshine" some months before, and that it was turned down. Now he wants a million dollars, an accounting of all profits, his name on the song, an apology and everything else you can think of.

Mr. Ginsberg calls his writers before him.

"Boys," he says, "it's the same old thing all over again. Here's a guy named Amos T. Squigg who says he gave us a song called 'Carolina Sunshine' before we published it. He wants everything but one of Hoover's collars in settlement. What'll we do?"

Now the writers know that Mr. Squigg had no more to do with that song than Mussolini. They know that a similar title arrives at the office every day in the year. They know it will continue to arrive as long as the firm is in existence. But what to do about it?

A defense of the suit will cost thousands of dollars. There will be days—maybe weeks—of weary court sessions. There will be headaches of every description. The legitimate song writers, of course, will win the suit in the end. But how about the cost and the worry?

So the case is settled. Mr. Squigg takes $200 and splits with his attorney in high glee. He has made himself a hundred bucks, and he can tell the home-town folks all about his connection with a hit song. Perhaps he may even be convinced that his claim was on the level, and never dream that he engaged in a racket that is one of the curses of show business. But if he doesn't know, you can bet your Uncle Henry's black necktie that his attorney does.

This situation exists not only in the song writing game, but in every branch of the amusement world. The motion picture industry is forever being troubled with plagiarism lawsuits. No sooner is a picture released than someone—and in many cases, five or six someone—leap up to claim the original idea. It has recently grown so bad, in fact, that several of the largest picture concerns now refuse absolutely to read any material that is submitted by outsiders. Manuscripts are returned intact.

You can readily understand why the racketeers find this game so attractive. They have everything to gain and absolutely nothing to lose. They can't hope to make any fortunes, of course, but they stand to profit anywhere from $100 to $1,000, which isn't bad in these days of depression.

It goes without saying that some of these suits are on the level. I should estimate that possibly one in 500 are legitimate basis for suit. Surely not more than that. Possibly less.

Some of the most capable attorneys in America are experts in plagiarism. But, when these men accept a case, you may be sure that the action has definite merit. If a movement were instituted to find some way of ending the racket of which I now write, I am sure they would be among the first to join. They despise the petty grafter just as much as you or I.

Mr. M. L. Malevinsky is such a man. He has won some of the biggest plagiarism cases that were ever brought before the courts in this country.

I've kidded Mr. Malevinsky about this before, but I know he will not mind if I do it again. This great attorney is a recognized authority on all things theatrical. He has been studying the art of playwrighting for many, many years. And if there is anything he doesn't know about the game it can't be particularly worth knowing.

In addition, the lawyer is the author of a book that tells you exactly how to write a play. If I remember that book correctly, it tells you of several underlying formulas which must be applied to the construction of a plot. Without these, insists Mr. Malevinsky, the show cannot succeed. With them, there is a strong chance of success.

A few years ago, Mr. Malevinsky made a great mistake. He took his vast knowledge of the technique of the stage and decided to employ it to further advantage. He, too, wrote a play. A complete, full length, actual play.

It could never be performed on the stage because it was completely unplayable! . . .

* * *

A TRUE STORY—and a splendid one—is related by Jack Haley about a chorus girl who was asked to attend a wild party when her show was on the road. The producer was one of those birds who loves to cater to names and money. And when the chorine said she didn't care to go to the party, the producer informed her she'd be out of a job unless she did. So the girl was compelled to go.

A collegiate brat, with far more money than brains, picked this girl as his own. After two or three drinks he began to paw her. When she repulsed him, he grew angry.

"Aw, quit your stalling," he cried nastily. "All girls have a price. What's yours?"

The chorine looked him straight in the eye.

"What's your mother's price?" she asked evenly.

The following afternoon, when the girl reached the theater, she found a huge basket of flowers and a sincere note of apology from the boy.

Nick of Time

Old Traditions Die in Films

Stage traditions many centuries old are dying rapidly under the influence of the motion picture, it is declared by Stuart Walker, for 20 years a stag director and Little Theater exponent.

Walker recently deserted the stage to join Paramount, where he is directing "The False Madonna," with Kay Francis, William Boyd and Conway Tearle.

"For centuries, it was believed that a player could not speak dialogue while moving," Walker explains. "As late as 1912, William Farnum, while engaged in a stage fight, halted the action, strode down-stage to deliver a speech and then returned to the battle. His opponent obligingly waited until he was through talking before re-attacking him.

"Many of our present-day stage stars will not permit another member of the cast to move while they are talking. They consider movement a ruse by the others to catch the audience's eye and 'steal' the scene on the presumption that the audience watches the movement rather than the speaker.

"Stage stars now often talk while walking, as a result of screen influence. Some of the most liberal-minded ones even permit supporting players to move during their speeches.

"Scene stealing is one of the fables of theater history. Players fought for the right of facing the audience during a scene. Many stars will never appear with animals or children in the belief that no adult can compete for the audience's attention with the latter. But it is a mighty weak star who can't dominate a performance."

Virginia Lee Corbin Now Movie Brunet

Virginia Lee Corbin, whose natural blonde tresses have been adorning the screen for these many years, becomes a brunet in the newspaper film, "X Marks the Spot." Miss Corbin was cast for the role of a Follies girl in "X Marks the Spot," after the very blonde Mary Nolan, and the golden-haired Sally Blane had already been selected for important roles.

Sunday Midnight Show Of "Champ" in Penn

"The Champ" picture co-featuring Wallace Beery and the juvenile star, Jackie Cooper, will be given a Sunday midnight performance in the Penn tomorrow night. The picture will feature the theater's regular bill some time in December.

Lunt Acts His 'Guardsman' In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Drama by Ferenc Molnar, acting by Ernest Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, that's the superlative combination on the screen of the Penn Theater. "The Guardsman" has been seen here among the offerings of the Theater Guild, but there's much in the film that was not and could not be in the stage play. That includes Zasu Pitts, who does the minor role of the maid in her accustomed mood of hilarious melancholy.

George Seibel

Most significant of all the things that couldn't be in the play is the scene from "Elizabeth the Queen," with which the film drama begins. It's the closing scene of Maxwell Anderson's tragedy, done just as Lunt and Fontanne did it at the Nixon. At its conclusion the quarrel starts between the twin stars, and the comedy proceeds just about like the original.

THE MOLNAR SLANT

It is one of those situations with the Molnar slant for which the gentleman from Budapest is famous. The great actor, jealous of his wife, decides to play a part and see whether she will remain faithful. He disguises himself as a guardsman, a Russian prince, and woos his own wife in that disguise.

It makes an intriguingly clever piece of drama in which these actors display brilliant work. Roland Young as the critical friend shares in the effective scenes.

BEST OF THE SEASON

Viewed as art this is the best screen offering of the season. What is added to the original stage play does not interfere with the skillful delineation of character nor the humorous flavor of the lines. It shows that a good play acted by good players can be put on the screen without spoiling it.

Besides a laughable Charlie Chase comedy with a new idea—the fake rainstorm to keep patrons of a cabaret from going home—there are some very dramatic snapshots in the Hearst newsreel. The scenes in Berlin at the Armistice Day observance and those in Naples on the arrival of the Italian Crown Prince with his wife, are like pages from a historic pageant.

Dawes Discovers China Row Is No Mah Jong Game

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

It's up to America to save the prestige of the League of Nations, which has the resale value of a wet match.

Ambassador Dawes is in Paris on the Chinese scramble. It has gotten past the Mah Jong stage and Charley may have to study up on pottery of the Ming dynasty.

Charley is a happy combination of diplomat and war baby. After being confined to barracks in the White House for four years he is rarin' to go.

He doesn't think that a gummy answer will shoo away wrath. The only time he turns the other cheek is in the direction of the cuspidor.

Even if he gets us in a terrific fight we will still claim he is the ideal Peace Ambassador.

What we need now is a homespun diplomat who can swing that olive branch like a shillelah.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: I see your Geoffrey Kerr (June Walker) blessed event was confirmed . . . Also that one of the so-called "good sports"-men called you "a usually unreliable source" . . . This is known as letting off foam, for the chap is burning to a crisp because you've been invading his branch for news—so what happened? . . . So the day after he called you that, the Gene Tunneys had their baby . . . The florist sent the Tunneys Xanthemums, as per your request . . . Do you intend to do this every time one of your blessed events is confirmed? . . . Heavens—the expense! . . .

John T. Rogers, who gives the newspaper craft a good name with his answers to crime riddles in St. Louis, thanks you so much for saying so . . . "5-Star Final," I hear, was banned in Boston . . . The author, by the way, pulled a nifty out on the Coast.

Kay Jordan, allegedly pretty important in social circles, opens in the new Owen Davis play next week . . . Mme. Clayburgh wishes you'd mention the charity tea dance for the unemployed to be held December 12, at the Casino, after the Army-Navy argument. . . . The East 70's have gone tall millinery—they have their own Lenox Little Theater showing the better German films. . . . Howey wants you to go to Boston for a luncheon. Told him I was afraid no could arrange. . . . Maybe later? The Al Lackeys (Sophie Tucker) after all these years. Are Like That! ! !

Here's a tug at your heart . . . Roy Schuster, the hoofer, who was driven out of his mind by his estranged wife (she kept hounding him for alimony when he was out of work and broke, and threatened him with jail) is in Sing Sing, you know . . . Doing 20 to life for shooting her dead . . . He was a dance instructor at one of the local studios—so what do you think? . . . He wrote Michaels, the dance teacher, ordering 15 pairs of taps for tap-dancing shoes—he says he is teaching a class in Sing Sing Prison how to hoof . . . So Michaels is sending Schuster the taps for the class sans any fee . . . Here's a bit of something to make you sick . . . What you heard about Rian lifting the "Portrait" idea is fact . . . I sent him a note asking him if it were true and he pencilled across it—"Yeah, it is," and enclosed a sample . . . He calls it "Portrait of a Columnist Thinking" . . . Yes, indeedy . . . Be sure and give him blurbs for the jackets of his books, again—you dope!

I hear a lotta people are not going to see O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra" (the six-hour show), because they haven't the price of a dinner . . . Dave Seed (Seed and Austin) complains that the Charles Butterworth gag in that movie is his . . . Received a blotter from a Justice of the Peace of Shrewsbury, N. J. Very comical . . . He points out: "Large, Light and Airy Courtroom" and "Plenty of Parking Space" . . . Heheheh!

Tommy Lyman has his own way of referring to a person who is a cheater, a two-timer, a no-good . . . Tommy calls him "an expert in crossfire arithmetic" . . . I overheard this description of an unfunny comedian: "The only way he can make you laugh is to tickle you" . . . Mickey Kane, the Western Union messenger, who delivered the telegram to Vincent Astor telling him they had recovered the body of his father after the Titanic sank—now is valet for Raymond Massey, the "Hamlet" of Norman-Bel Geddes' show.

Elinson called. Said he wondered if you forgot his Armistice Day quip . . . That was the one about everybody being silent for two minutes that day—but the columnists, who couldn't quit talking about themselves that long . . . Oh, yes, another from Izzy—if you use it, head it "Ghost Story" . . . Izzy asserts one thing he never wants to see is Gandhi when his face turns as white as his sheet . . . Several years ago Arthur Hammerstein ordered an expensive boat built in the basement of his theater. . . . Fifteen men worked on it there for three months, which cost Hammerstein $50,000 . . . When the boat was finished they discovered there was no way to get it out of the doors in the cellar leading to the street.

The cast of "Grand Hotel" has privately produced a burlesque movie of that show, and will exhibit it to pals at the Nat'l Theater Saidee night . . . J. Israels, 2d, is drama defending for "This Wk an N. Y." . . . He will produce a revue with Broun money woes first to be settled . . . Sinclair Lewis brawled with the help at the Bath Club last wk. . . . Did you thank Woollcott for that? . . . Why don't you spill the "inside" on the D. F.-J. C. trouble? . . . A voice called and said please do not reveal the name of that poster gal until the campaign is over. He said you'd understand. R. C.

Next Jean Harlow Film Is "Blonde Baby"

The platinum blonde, Jean Harlow begins work next week in Columbia's production, "Blonde Baby," in which she plays the title role. William Beaudine will direct the picture, which will have Walter Byron in the male lead. Miss Harlow has just completed "Platinum Blonde," another Columbia production. She is under contract to Howard Hughes, president of the Caddo Company.

"Spirit of Notre Dame" Comes to Sheridan

"The Spirit of Notre Dame," worthwhile memorial film to Knute Rockne, opened yesterday in the Sheridan Square. Lew Ayres heads the cast. Critics heralded the film as the best football picture to date, upon its recent downtown showing.

Many Events In Hearst Newsie

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Germany's observance of the thirteenth anniversary of the end of the World War is presented in a sight and sound in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News with a detailed description by the Globe Trotter. It is showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. The principal celebration was held in Munich. The service includes a military grouping with a massed band of hundreds of pieces playing patriotic airs. A military salute is fired over the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Yankee mermaids hold a great water carnival in a huge indoor pool in New York City, the various events being a tryout for the 1932 Olympics. An exciting free-for-all race which is won by Eleanor Holm, former Olympic champion.

NAPLES GREETS PRINCE

Crown Prince Humbert of Italy and his princess bride, Maria Jose, are greeted by 200,000 wildly cheering Neopolitans as they arrive in the City by the Sea from Milan to make their future home. It has been many years since a crown prince of Italy has officially resided in Naples.

Virginia, the home state of Woodrow Wilson, honors the War President's memory by unveiling a bust statue of him in the Capitol, at Richmond. Six members of the ex-president's cabinet are present with many other distinguished men as Mrs. Wilson, the late president's widow, officiates at the ceremonies. Josephus Daniels, who was Secretary of War in the Wilson cabinet, pays high tribute to his late chief.

There is a picture of a fox and hound chase with the riders flying and the tiny, frightened fox eluding dogs and riders. The fox succeeds in making his escape.

CHAPLIN'S SONS TRAVEL

The two little sons of Charles Chaplin, Charles, Jr., and Sidney, are seen and heard on the deck of the steamer on their way to France.

Pussy cats, doggies, monkeys, tiger cubs, a baby elephant and whisper—a skunk, are all included in the New York prize pet show at Madison Square Garden, New York. It is the greatest aggregation of pets ever brought together.

BEST LAST LINE BY HOSPITAL PATIENT

Completes Yuletide Jingle Despite Illness; No. 11 Ready for Competitors

It must be pretty hard to write the last line for a "Christmas Jingle" in a hospital, but Charles W. Brassfield, a patient in the City Hospital, Mayview, turned the trick with Jingle No. 4 of the Sun-Telegraph series. He'll get a check for $5 and will probably be glad to get it. The "Christmas Jingle" as Brassfield completed it now reads as follows:

A big-hearted mailman was Finer,
Carried gifts till his body grew thinner;
As the big feast day neared
All his family feared
The collapse of their faithful bread-winner.

Try your hand on No. 11, appearing on this page today. If you submit what the judges think is the best of all "last lines" sent in, you get a check for $5. The five next best "last lines" will each be awarded $1.

All readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, with the exception of employes, are invited to enter the "Christmas Jingle" contest. You can send in as many last lines as you like. Equal awards will be paid to readers whose answers are tied in the judging. You do not have to buy a Sun-Telegraph to enter this contest. You may examine the files of this newspaper at the public library or at any one of the offices of the Sun-Telegraph, where you may make a tracing of the "Christmas Jingle" blank if you wish.

Each Sun-Telegraph "Christmas Jingle" will be consecutively numbered.

Prosecutor Victim of 'Con' Game Suspect

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—State's Attorney John A. Swanson, leader in the fight against Chicago crime, lost $11,000 in building ventures sponsored by W. J. Hughes, who faces prosecution on "con" game charges, it became known yesterday. Prosecutors claim investors in Hughes' schemes lost a total of approximately $2,000,000.

MOURNER HELD IN SLAYING

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Five minutes after the funeral of Mrs. Willis Dickey, 67, beaten to death in her home here last Saturday night, one of the mourners was arrested yesterday in connection with the murder.

The prisoner was booked on a suspicion charge, pending further investigation. He is a relative of the slain woman.

The arrest was made quietly, and the other mourners, most of whom were elderly women, were not aware of the action.

Police said they had been aware Mrs. Dickey expected a guest Saturday night, for she had made up a bed which was not ordinarily in use.

JURY RETURNS 13 MORE VOTE INDICTMENTS

Wylie Avenue Pastor Among Those Accused; Election Case True Bills Total 110

Thirteen more election case indictments, bringing the total growing out of the September primaries to 110, were returned by the county grand jury before it adjourned for the week-end. Routine cases are to occupy the jury the first three days next week, but the day after Thanksgiving is to be devoted to more election cases.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park stated that so many routine cases are before the jury this month that it is doubtful if the investigation of alleged tax fraud can be taken up by the November jury. It probably will be resumed before the December jury.

MINISTER INDICTED

Those indicted yesterday follow:

The Rev. W. Wade, Negro, 1420 Wylie avenue, charged with threatening voters in the Ninth District of the Third Ward, and with striking Anthony M. DePazio in the face with his fist.

John J. Carlin and Mrs. Norman Daugherty, of Kilbuck Township, charged with voting on tax receipts of other persons.

Thomas Cronan, Kilbuck Township, charged he voted when he was not qualified to do so.

Lillian Wilson, charged with standing near the voting machine in the Tenth District of the Third Ward and passing out cards and soliciting votes.

INTIMIDATION CHARGED

Carrie Goodman, charged with intimidating voters in the Ninth District of the Third Ward, where she was a watcher.

Mike Wendell, Charles P. Betters and Carmen Bosco, election officers of the Ninth District of the Third Ward, charged by Carrie Coogman with refusing to allow qualified voters to cast their ballots.

Tony Siano, accused by Mrs. H. G. Gray of offering a bribe of $5 to Mrs. Ellen Harrison, of 1824 Center avenue, to vote for James Lovuolo for Constable in the Sixth District of the Third Ward.

Lola Atwell accused by Charles Johnston of offering Johnston $5 to vote for Roy T. Anderson for Constable in the Fourth District of the Third Ward.

Hunters Abandon Chase to Fish as Mercury Soars

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Nov. 21.—Greene County hunters abandoned their shotguns and rifles in favor of fishing tackle when the mercury soared to the 70 degree mark, making hunting practically impossible but furnishing fine fishing weather. Large catches were reported by most anglers.

South Fayette Twp. Commissioner Picked

E. D. Hanna has been appointed Township Commissioner for the Second District of South Fayette Township by Judge James H. Gray in Quarter Sessions Court. He succeeds Julius Lesjak, returned.

BOARD COUNTS VOTE OF CITIES

Boat Burns, 4 Hurt In Grid Celebration

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—A wharf boat was set on fire and four hurt in an automobile wreck as students "whooped it up" last night in a demonstration preceding the Wheeling High-Linsly Military Institute football game today.

Sparks from a big bonfire on the municipal wharf set fire to the roof of the boat, but the blaze was extinguished with little damage. Four students were hurt when two automobiles in a high school parade collided. One of the victims, Virginia House, 17, was taken to a hospital.

Millvale Man Shot, Owes Life to Tobacco Tin

Diebold, a road foreman employed in Shaler Township, returned to his home yesterday from St. Francis Hospital, where a bullet was removed from below his heart.

While at work on a road on the Grail plan, Shaler Township, Diebold was struck by a stray bullet. The slug passed through a tobacco tin in his vest pocket and entered the flesh under his heart.

Grove City Woman Hurt in Auto Crash

Mrs. R. Staley, 30, of Grove City, Pa., suffered slight injuries last night when the automobile in which she was riding with James S. Wilson, 30, also of Grove City, collided with a machine driven by W. L. Page, 39, of 1919 Doll way, at Montgomery and Federal streets. Both drivers were arrested.

DONORA HOLDUP LOOT $1,500

A state wide search was in progress today for trace of three unarmed men who held up H. S. Miller, of the Miller Taxicab Company, of Donora, and escaped with $1,500.

Miller told police he was alone in his office when the men entered and demanded that he give them his money. They opened the cashdrawer which they looted and escaped in a waiting automobile.

A description of the men, who Miller said were unknown to him, was broadcast by the police teletype.

NEWS FOR EVERY BUSINESS

Teletypewriter exchanges, now established by the Bell System, make it possible for any subscriber to this new service to typewrite by wire instantly to any other subscriber . . . across the city or across the continent.

Teletypewriter Service*—typing by wire—is now offered like telephone service . . . When you need it! For any number of minutes! To any city!

As a subscriber to this service, your typist simply calls the desired teletypewriter by typing its number, and "central" immediately makes the connection. Thus you have two-way typewritten communication for any length of time . . . as short as five minutes, or as long as you may wish.

Messages, inquiries, reports — typed in your office—are instantly and accurately reproduced on any other subscriber's teletypewriter, whether 300 feet or 3000 miles away. Identical typewritten copies, made by both sending and receiving machines, are available for permanent records.

Teletypewriter Service provides two-way communication.

Speed of connection is as fast as telephone service.

A typewritten record, one or more copies, is produced simultaneously by both sending and receiving machines.

Material transmitted may be recorded on forms if desired.

You can use Teletypewriter Service any time you need it.

A most economical form of record communication.

This new service differs from private line teletypewriter service in that any subscriber may ask for any other subscriber and be connected immediately. Its advantages are offered to every business, large or small. The cost is low.

TRADE SHOULD NOT TREMBLE AT CONGRESS

Fallacy of Blaming Business Woes on Meddling Shown After Last Adjournment

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.

Business has no legitimate reason to fear disturbing action from Congress at its next session beginning December 7.

The fallacy of ascribing business hesitation to political meddling was plainly revealed after Congress adjourned last March. Conservative observers had been predicting that business would be better when Congress closed its doors.

As a matter of fact, after the adjournment business began to get going, and by midsummer it was definitely better. It can hardly be argued that the security market was favorable to recent business improvement.

Mr. Rukeyser.

The sessions were not in session, but the experience tends to emphasize the error of the earlier prediction that business sentiment would grow more cheerful as soon as Congress got out of the way.

AGREEMENT DIFFICULT

As for the next Congress, the probability is that it will be economy-minded and that it will make many far-reaching proposals but that agreement on a program will be difficult. With the lower House almost equally divided among the two major parties with the Senate more or less hostile to the Executive and with President Hoover likely to veto measures which are distasteful to him, the hazard is likely to be lack of sound administrative legislation rather than the passing of numerous task-spelling and unsound economic laws.

In the forthcoming issue of the Nation's Business, Richard A. Gushard, Washington correspondent, is said to relate what business has expected of Congress, concluding:

"Because of the diversity of opinion with which the new Congress is impregnated, the possible inability of various independent and semi-independent balance-of-power groups to harmonize their own differences, and the prospect of vetoes of legislation passed by coalitions of Democratic and Insurgent Republicans over the opposition of the administration forces, there is a tendency to predict that, when the coming 'session adjourns' some time next spring or summer, the legislative record of accomplishment will be slim indeed."

CHANGES EXAGGERATED

In general, as between the two major parties, the effect of political changes on business has been exaggerated. The Republican party encouraged the notion that it was identified with prosperity and accordingly, starting from that questionable premise, the public naturally holds the party in power responsible for depression. As a matter of fact, economic forces operate without much regard to which of the two parties happens to be in office. Col. Leonard P. Ayres of the Cleveland Trust Company compiled statistics several years ago which purposed to show that over 40 years the course of prosperity and depression was little influenced by which of the two major parties were in office.

I mention this subject because at the present time it is the fashion for conventional brokers in Wall street to lay great stress on the alleged bearish significance of the near-term meeting of the national legislature.

I. C. C. Sets Hearing For Next Saturday

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. (INS)—The Interstate Commerce Commission has announced it would hear arguments on November 28 on the petition of the Association of Railway Executives to set up a railroad credit association to administer the funds derived from a proposed increase in freight rates to aid weak railroads to meet their interest charges.

The association's plan is materially different from that suggested by the commission in that it proposes that any funds distributed should be in the nature of loans and not as gratuities.

Considers Rotating Employment Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. — Arrangements for a series of meetings throughout the country for the purpose of securing adoption of the rotating employment plan wherever practicable on construction operations are being completed by Col. William A. Starrett of New York, vice president of the Associated General Contractors of America and the member of President Hoover's organization on unemployment relief who has been delegated to promote rotation in the construction industry.

Follansbee Bros. Reopens 11 Mills

Inaugurating a new system whereby all employes will get at least part time work on a schedule calling for four turns of six hours each weekly, Follansbee Bros. & Co. have reopened six tin and five sheet mills at Follansbee, W. Va. These mills have been shut down for some time. The new system gives employment to about 700 men.

B. and O. Authorized To Operate B., R. & P.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to operate the lines of Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railway under an operating agreement. Similar treatment was suggested for the Buffalo and Susquehanna properties, although the commission dismissed the proposal to operate the Susquehanna properties through the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh.

The commission had previously authorized the Baltimore and Ohio to acquire virtually 100 per cent stock control of these carriers.

Freight Traffic Volume Declines

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The volume of freight traffic handled by the Class I railroads of this country in the first nine months of 1931 amounted to 261,819,675,000 net ton miles, according to the bureau of railway economics.

This was a reduction of 59,675,414,000 net ton miles or 18.6 per cent under the corresponding period in 1930, and a reduction of 107,870,976,000 net ton miles or 29.2 per cent under the same period in 1929.

LUMBER TRADE SEEKS 'PLAN'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The lumber industry will learn shortly what program is to be followed in establishing and maintaining an economic balance between production and consumption of forest products as well as a unified plan for forest conservation.

Definite recommendations have been reached by three important sub-committee groups which will be considered by the National Timber Conservation Board on November 25.

The recommendations represent the findings of sub-committees on publicly-owned timber, sustained forest yield and forest taxation.

The respective reports deal with the acquisition, sales and cutting of publicly-owned timber, means of promoting economic perpetuation of the forests and forest industries through sustained yield forest management and federal and state tax laws in relation to timber growing and conservation.

WALL STREET HEARS

That a revival of the War Finance Corporation or some similar organization is under active consideration in some prominent quarters.

That the Bank of France may have to write off some 2,000,000,000 francs as result of the depreciation of its sterling balances.

Collapse of Deal Fails to Upset Cotton Mart

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP)—The failure of the plan to sell 500,000 bales of cotton to France was said in cotton brokerage circles yesterday to have little effect upon the market.

It was pointed out that 500,000 bales was less than 5 per cent of the visible supply as reported last week, and but a negligible portion of the entire crop. One cotton broker said it was scarcely "a drop in the bucket."

While banking quarters declined to comment officially upon the French private bankers' refusal to finance their part of the project, it was said in usually well informed quarters that there was little or no likelihood of the American bankers improving their terms so that the deal might be consummated.

SHIPPING DATA AVAILABLE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Commerce Department announces the publication of a monthly pamphlet of current information on American shipping.

The publication gives a complete list of the seagoing merchant vessels of the United States of 500 gross tons and over as of the date of its issue.

All major facts concerning each vessel are presented in concise and understandable manner. These include rig, service, tonnage, speed and year of build, as well as the name and address of the owner.

In addition, there are various world statistics covering tonnage idle vessels, oil burners, launchings, constructions and losses and Panama and Suez Canal statistics, as well as distances in nautical miles between the principal American and foreign ports.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

The demand for fruits and vegetables was only fairly active in the wholesale produce markets of Pittsburgh. There were no changes in quotations.

No changes in existing quotations were noted in the butter, egg and cheese markets. The market remained steady with moderate trading.

STOCKS MAKE SUBSTANTIAL ADVANCE

Rails Lead Rebound, While Can, Steel, Woolworth and Case Show Good Gains

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The stock market recovered substantially in the early trading today.

Rails, particularly, rebounded after yesterday's setback. Wall street took a somewhat more hopeful view of the negotiations between the carriers and their employes. Gains of 1 to 2 points appeared in New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio and Union Pacific.

Other shares rising a point or so included American Can, United States Steel, Woolworth and Case. American Telephone recovered after an early setback of a point.

Rejection by Japan and China of the League of Nations' plan for an armistice, after yesterday's agreement in principle, was the chief surprise in the overnight news. There are many in Wall street who believe, however, that Far Eastern events, as far as that situation has gone, have had little fundamental effect on our markets, although it is admitted that speculative quarters have been stirred by the possibility of a demand for raw materials in the event of an extended war.

Because the railroad stocks broke through the October 5 lows yesterday, brokerage houses pointed out that the action of industrials must be watched closely. The short interest is said to have increased substantially during the week's decline and it was felt a sharp technical rally was in the making, although predictions as to when it would appear were indefinite.

Banking circles are encouraged by the fact that the necessary machinery for re-examining Germany's capacity to pay has been set in motion so far in advance of the Hoover moratorium's expiration. The American member of the International Advisory Committee is to be Walter W. Stewart, former economic adviser to the Bank of England.

BOARD REVEALS WHEAT SALES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—With an investigation of its operations near, the Farm Board today made public an explanation by the Grain Stabilization Corporation of its wheat sales to flour millers last winter.

A 1,000-word statement directed at Gov. Murray, of Oklahoma, reiterated Chairman Stone's justification of the transactions by which flour made from stabilization wheat was sold abroad, and asserted no excessive profits were derived by the millers.

Gov. Murray, who charged that one firm made $600,000 by the arrangement, has been invited by the Senate Agricultural Committee to attend hearings beginning next Tuesday, at which the board's activities will be investigated.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

WESTINGHOUSE BOOKINGS LOWER

Decline in Orders From Utility Companies Factor In Poor October Showing

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Bookings of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company in October were smaller than for any other month this year except January, and there has been no improvement in the volume of incoming business this month.

October operations resulted in a loss and November is not likely to make any better showing. One factor in the decline in business of Westinghouse has been smaller purchases of equipment by utility companies and this condition promises to prevail for some time. The present lessened demand for power following a period of expansion of utility properties has resulted in an oversupply of power facilities which should limit purchases of new equipment for some time.

Assuming that no earnings will be shown this year, since in the first nine months a deficit of $866,709 was reported and allowing for dividend payments in 1931 amounting to almost $16,000,000, surplus which at the end of 1930 amounted to $85,373,912 will be reduced to less than $85,000,000 at the end of this year, allowing for no other adjustments.

It is probable that the company will declare no more dividends this year. The preferred stock is entitled to $3.50 a share paid or declared in any one year before the common stock receives any dividends. While only $2.62½ has been declared on the common and preferred stocks this year, $3.87½ has been paid on each class of stock.

By this reason the company is not forced to declare any further dividends on the preferred and in all probability will defer its December directors' meeting for dividend action until early in January.

The common and preferred stocks received a dividend of $1.25 each in January, but for the next two quarters the dividends were reduced to $1 each and on October 31, a dividend of 62½ cents was paid on each class of stock.

WINDOW GLASS DEMAND STEADY

Glass Industry Greatly Interested in Activity Of Hoover Committee

Demand for window glass during the past week continued to hold at its recent level, according to the American Glass Review.

The previous six weeks have seen fair conditions existing in this branch of the flat glass industry and although 1931 cannot reach a favorable comparison with long-term figures present demand when compared to that of the past 12 months is satisfactory.

November has been a good month for the window glass producers and it is to be expected that production, towards the end of the year will gradually taper off. As a general rule December is a slow month. The coming one is not expected to be much different from the like month in former years. The regular decline that comes at this time of the year is attributed chiefly to the inventory season. Dealers are planning to have as little stock on hand as possible while taking inventory, but this being an unusual year it is doubtful whether the approaching weeks will see as great a decline as was customary in former years.

BETTER YEAR AHEAD

Of great interest to the flat glass trade at the present time is the activity of President Hoover's committee on home building and home ownership which is scheduled to meet in Washington December 2 to 5. Any activity which can be stirred up in the construction line will undoubtedly be felt in demand for flat glass. With building finances again in a liquid state manufacturers will find 1932 production levels rising to a good gain over those of the current year.

PLATE CALL JUMPY

Plate glass has been moving rather irregularly. In this connection the automobile market is taken as an indicator of demand, and while employment in the automotive field has enjoyed somewhat of a rise there has been neither a steady nor consistent gain in plate glass figures. This, no doubt, is due to the fact that all cars now being manufactured have for quite some time been anticipated insofar as they are dealer display models.

Demand for plate glass with mirror makers and distributors goes along on its former "buy-when-needed" basis but the coming week will probably see a better condition existing.

New Products Increasing Hachmeister Profits

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE DEVELOPMENT OF NEW products has been the major factor in increasing the earnings of the Hachmeister-Lind Company to levels higher than last year. Net profit for 1931 will be greater than in 1930, when $133,247, or 3 cents a share, was earned on the common stock after deducting dividends on the $6 convertible preference stock.

In the first half of the present year the company earned $90,629, or 36 cents a share on the common stock. The current rate of earnings is nearly twice as great as in the first half, according to a statement made by Harry A. Hachmeister, president. The expense of development work in the light and mastic tile divisions tended to reduce earnings in the first half.

These new products are contributing substantially to earnings at the present time. Every month this year, with the exception of one, has shown progress in net earnings over the preceding month. The current rate of earnings of about $30,000 a month after all charges indicates the net profit for the full year will be nearly $180,000, which would be equivalent to about $1.69 a share on the common stock.

New Products Sold

THE SALES OF AUTOMOBILE bulbs have been increasing rapidly. The company does not make the bulbs, but places a mirror finish on a portion of the glass by a patented process. The treated bulbs cut down the glare of the lights and concentrate the beam over a wide area of the road. Sales of this product exceed $121,000 a month.

Sales of mastic tile, a floor covering resembling linoleum, have developed to such an extent that new production equipment is being installed for the second time this year. Capacity will be increased from 10,000 square feet per 10-hour day to 12,000 square feet. This division has been working two 10-hour shifts for most of the present year. Unfilled orders amount to 2,000,000 square feet.

Handles 600 Chemicals

IN ADDITION TO THE PRODUCTION of floor coverings and lights, the company handles over 600 chemicals. The most important of these are used in the electroplating trade. Paints form another part of the company's business. These products are sold largely to the steel, car building and railroad industries.

A special department makes and applies various types of plasters which have been developed to meet the growing demand for novel types of wall finishes.

The wide range of products tends to insure the company against the effects of adverse conditions in any single industry.

Has No Funded Debt

THE COMPANY HAS NO FUNDED debt. The preference stock amounts to 21,800 shares of $6 cumulative convertible stock. The first 10,000 shares are convertible into common in the ratio of four for one and the remaining 11,800 in the ratio of three for one. The common outstanding amounted to 82,289 shares on June 30.

Copperhead Killed In Chartiers Avenue

A copperhead snake, 26 inches long, was killed late yesterday in the rear of the Pennsylvania Drilling Company, 1201 Chartiers avenue, by A. L. Rabberman, an employe of the company. Rabberman said he saw the snake in the yard and killed it with a stick.

Pitcairn Grid Team Feted by Alumni

Pitcairn High School's football team was entertained by the Alumni Association at a banquet and dance after the Springdale game, at home, yesterday afternoon. The banquet, in the Presbyterian Church, was followed by a dance in the school gymnasium.

RETAIL TRADE IMPROVED

There has been some improvement in business sentiment, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review. Activity in both the wholesale and the retail trade has gained slightly.

Sales of holiday merchandise are increasing, but the mild weather has continued to retard buying of heavy wearing apparel. The demand for cheaper grades of radio sets is stronger, but higher-priced sets are not moving very freely.

Bituminous coal production shows but little change, continuing materially lower than a year ago. Demand for coal for heating purposes has been interfered with through continued mild temperatures. Industrial demand has shown little improvement and prices, particularly for slack, continue very low.

SCHOOL PLANS ANNUAL DANCE

Over 600 people are expected to attend the annual dance of the student council and the alumni association of the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy at 8 o'clock tonight in the ballroom of the Schenley Hotel.

The program includes initiation of recent graduates into the alumni association, presentation of favors and awarding of prizes. Music will be furnished by Carl Ludwig's Orchestra.

N. Y. Critic to Speak On Art Exhibition

Murdock Pemberton, art critic of the New Yorker, and author of the comedy "Sing High Sing Low," now playing in New York, will speak in Carnegie Lecture Hall Monday evening, on the Thirtieth International. His subject will be "Art and the Layman."

This will be the last of the series of evening lectures on the present exhibition of paintings.

STEEL INGOT PRODUCTION AT 29%

Special Orders Cause for Recent Heavy Schedules; Prices Holding Steady

By B. E. V. LUTY

No increase of a general character in steel buying has occurred, the heavier production of late being due to special cases. In each of the last three weeks steel ingot production has been at about 29 per cent, against the low of about 26 per cent in next to the last week of October. The present rate is above October or September, but below August and preceding months. For three weeks the Pittsburgh district has been at about 30 per cent.

The steel market is of substantially full breadth, scarcely any consuming lines being absent, but it lacks thickness as requirements of all consumers are relatively light, and it has no length, as orders are only for very prompt shipment, being telegraphed in many cases.

RAIL BUYING TO GAIN.

A large amount of fabricated structural steel work is said to be on the boards, but actual lettings reported in each of the last seven weeks have been light, averaging two-fifths of the rate during the first six months of the year, and order books of the fabricating shops are light.

In the past the major part of annual rail buying has occurred between the middle of September and the middle of December. This time only a few orders have been placed and buying in general has been postponed until after the turn of the year, while as there is a seasonal period for laying rails it cannot long be postponed. As the cost comes chiefly from depreciation accounts, poor earnings of the carriers will not necessarily greatly decrease the tonnages to be ordered.

TONNAGE SPURT SEEN

Finished steel prices continue to hold virtual rigidity all along the line, and very naturally since cutting would bring only small orders and the cuts would be known to sellers generally within 24 to 48 hours, presumably pulling down the market for everybody. The balance of probability is that at no time in the future will steel demand be as light as it is in the present quarter year, yet there is no ground for predicting that no lower prices will prevail at any time in the next few years. All steel trade history has shown lowest prices to come after demand has definitely begun a substantial improvement.

Percentage rates of steel production as commonly reported are accurate enough in their way, but are conventional in that they are computed simply against capacity as reported for December 31, 1930. Prospective capacity for next year is 4 or 5 per cent higher, while on the other hand there has never been a steel demand for any length of time approaching present capacity. The seven-year period through 1929 included five very good years and two somewhat poor years, and the seven years averaged 45,750,000 tons of ingot production a year. The current quarter is running at close to 19,000,000 tons a year or about 41 per cent of the seven-year average, which looks much better than the 28 per cent cited by the conventional method, while double the tonnage would represent more than two-thirds the output in the record year, 1929.

Sivitz to Address Orthodox Rabbis

CINCINNATI, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The semi-annual meeting of the union of Orthodox Jewish congregations opened here last night with Sabbath eve services and the formal reception of 50 Rabbis attending.

The first of four convention meetings was to be held today. Mlazeh, or "after the close of Sabbath" will be observed. Among the Rabbis who will address the meeting is M. Sivitz, Pittsburgh.

GREAT IRISH LINE MAY BALK TROJANS

SOME OF THE courageous souls picking Southern California to defeat Notre Dame today based their predictions on the fact that in Ernie Pinckert, Orville Mohler, Gaius Shaver, Jimmy Musick and Tom Mallory, the Trojans have one of the greatest groups of backs in the country. But if the Irish are beaten this afternoon—and only a final score against them will convince the average fan that it can be done—it won't be the Coast team's backfield that does it. It'll be the line. Before those backs can get anywhere the Trojans forwards will have to outplay the great Notre Dame wall, and that's something which no rival has been able to do this season.

Ernie Pinckert

And if the lines prove equal and it does narrow down to a question of backs, where is there anything to indicate that Pinckert and his mates are entitled to a higher rating than Notre Dame's swarm of ball carriers, headed by the peerless Marchy Schwartz? Not only do the Irish possess backs just as good as the Coast stars, if not better, but they have them in far greater abundance.

SO THE DOPE that the Golden Staters would win on account of their fine backs was just as poorly founded as the assertion that because the Trojans on December 18, 1926, were the last team to defeat Notre Dame, history might be expected to repeat today. History had two chances to repeat in 1929 and 1930 but in both instances it failed to click.

There was another big event on the card today to divide the attention of fandom, with Yale and Harvard meeting for the fiftieth time in the series that began in 1875. Of the previous games between the old rivals, Yale won 26, Harvard 17, and six ended in ties.

THE APPROACHING TILT between Pitt and Nebraska recalls that back in 1921 Pop Warner had just started his Panthers off on a winning streak after losing two early games when the Cornhuskers came out of the West and handed him a 10-to-0 beating. Pop had begun poorly that season, losing to Lafayette 9-0 and to West Virginia 9-6, but after the latter defeat and a 21-14 scare at the hands of Cincinnati the Old Fox suddenly tossed on the field another of his really great elevens.

In the next two games Syracuse was humbled 35-0 and Penn 28-0. On the Panther team that year were Charley Bowser, now head coach at Bowdoin; Harvey Harman, present coach at Penn; Jack Sack, who later coached Geneva; Charley Winterburn, backfield coach at Stanford; Tom Davies, coach at Rochester; Tiny Hewitt, assistant coach at Alabama; Herb Stein and Pie Williams.

AFTER THOSE TWO decisive wins it was thought Pitt really was going somewhere. And then along came Nebraska. Despite the fact that the Panthers were being outplayed it was felt that they might yet pull the game out of the fire, but in the final play of the first half, Swanson, Nebraska captain and left end, took a 30-yard pass from Hartley, the fullback, and raced 38 yards more for a touchdown. And in the last period the Huskers scored again on a dropkick from the toe of Quarterback Preston. It was one of the worst defeats in Pitt history. The Panthers were outrushed 306 yards to 77, and made only three first downs to the Huskers' 13. The Nebraska passing attack accounted for 76 yards, while the Panthers failed on an even dozen occasions.

Jack Redmond

TO THE CAMP of the Pirates last spring there came a sturdy boy with a smile and a big glove. Jack Redmond was the youth's name, and nobody, aside from Art Griggs and one or two others, knew anything about him.

Jack was a catcher, but the camp was well supplied with receivers, and the lad had little to do other than warm up pitchers. But he did get a chance or two in the practice games and his ginger and impressive manner, on both defense and offense, made him appear out of the ordinary. Lack of experience was against him, however, and he went along to Griggs on the Pirate farm at Wichita in the Western League.

THE WICHITA CLUB jumped off with a pennant rush, and, being a first-place candidate, could not afford to experiment with a green kid. So, along with some others, Redmond was sent to Bartlesville, Okla., in the Western Association.

The Pittsburgh club controlled the Wichita outfit, and, naturally, Barney Dreyfuss & Co., did not wish to allow any promising youngster to slip through their fingers. But the Bucs had to conform to the laws regarding the number of players sent out under options, and inasmuch as they were crowding the limit, Redmond was released outright to the Class C club at Bartlesville.

AN INTERESTING SEQUEL to the tale is found in the announcement that the Cincinnati Reds have purchased Catcher Redmond from Bartlesville. The athlete is none other than the boy who made such a pleasing impression in the Pirate camp. Evidently he jumped into his work in the bush league with the same zest he displayed at the Corsair training grounds. Averages compiled on the Western Association season show that Jack played in 104 games and batted .280, his 95 hits including 23 doubles, six triples and three home runs. The Reds appear to need a receiver or two, so that the lively recruit may get a real chance in the big show. He is built somewhat along the lines of Rolly Hemsley, but considerably heavier.

THE HOCKEY SEASON is well under way, yet not one fan in a hundred knows that a new puck has been introduced. For that matter, nobody else has known anything about it either, except those closely connected with the sport in its organized form.

Just what the object was in keeping it a secret has not been learned, but it's a fact that the hockey powers have followed the lead of baseball and golf rulers and adopted a new puck. The rubber disk in use since the start of the present season differs only slightly from the old one, but there's a change nevertheless.

ART ROSS, manager of the Boston Bruins in the National League, designed the newest models. The sharp edges have been rounded off to prevent the disk from rolling when being pushed along the ice by a player's stick. The board of governors of the National League adopted the new puck at their summer meeting but, like the baseball magnates with the lively ball 10 years ago, didn't tell anybody about it.

Tony Canzoneri

Discussions have started, pro and con, as to the worth of the new puck. Some players have complained, even this early, that the disk is harder to lif, from the surface of ice, and that as a result sharpshooters will have a more difficult time flipping it into enemy nets.

IN WINNING THE decision over Kid Chocolate in New York last night to retain the world lightweight boxing crown, Tony Canzoneri demonstrated again that he is one of the best of the present-day titleholders. A real champion in every respect is Tony. He not only takes on the most dangerous men in his class without any haggling or side-stepping, but he beats them in a fashion to leave no doubt as to his superiority. Within a few months he has turned back Jack (Kid) Berg twice and now the capable Chocolate. Canzoneri appears to stand pretty much alone in his division, and unless Ray Miller may be conceded a chance there is no one to threaten him.

Duquesne University's varsity football team makes its initial home daylight appearance of the season here this afternoon and battles the formidable Flickertails of North Dakota at Forbes Field. A year ago, the boys from the North West defeated the Dukes, 14-6, in a night game.

It's Homecoming Day for the Dukes, and old grads and more or less young grads from all parts of the country will be on hand. The alumni association has a luncheon scheduled for Webster Hall prior to the game.

A fairly heavy rainfall, shortly before noon, indicated that the footing would be uncertain, and the ball hard to handle, but the downpour failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the "homecomers."

The Flickertails, undefeated since they played the Army a week previous to last year's contest here, and boasting a scoreless tie with Oregon, the same team that later defeated New York University, has been installed a favorite over the locals, which, on the basis of the irrespective records, appears to be only right and proper. However, the fighting qualties of Duquesne are certain to prevent anything even remotely resembling a rout, and may even bring about a Duke triumph.

A crowd of 5,000 is expected for the contest, which is bidding with the city championship high school encounter in the Pitt Stadium for the favor of the gridiron followers.

DUKES IN TRIM

Having rested since holding Holy Cross to a close score two weeks ago, Coach Layden's Dukes are in tip-top physical condition for the fray. Layden has effected changes both in his backfield and on the line. On the rush-line Niccolai, who was shifted from a tackle to an end for the Western Maryland brush, has been restored to a tackle and likely will start on the left side of the line today. In the backfield, Cristina is favored for the fullback nomination over Zananelli, with Pawlina at right half, the speedy Al Delbuca at left and Bud Devenney at quarter. Layden will not make a definite announcement as to his starting fullback until game time.

On the line, Baker and Abele are to guard the terminals. Niccolai and O'Donnell will pair off at the tackles, with Capt. Mike Ferrera and DeCarbo at the guards and Ciccone at center.

BURMA BIG STAR

The powerful Flickertails, led by their rip-snorting fullbacker, Capt. Buster Burma, arrived in town early yesterday and went through a snappy workout in the afternoon. Coach West was detained in Chicago and did not arrive until this morning, but his assistant, Buck Starbuck, announced a starting lineup which is to be in force today.

Working with Burma in the Flickertail backfield will be the heady quarterback, Wexler; Richmond, the punter and star quarterback, and Pierce, hailed as the best ball toter in North Dakota's history. In reserve will be the speedy Knauff, Revell and Bob Dablow for first string duty. Pierce was injured and unable to play in the tie with Oregon.

On the line the Dakotans' all-America prospect, Fred Febler, and Marback, will be at the ends. Felber both catches and throws passes and is said to be the best defensive end in the Middle West. At the tackles Long and Wick, both weighing better than 190 pounds, are to start. Diblow and

The South Hills High School football team, champion of Section II, will be striving for the first City League title this afternoon when it meets Schenley High School champion of Section I, in a post-season battle at the Stadium.

The rain which moistened the Stadium turf shortly before noon today was not expected to give any particular advantage to either team.

It has been eight years since the City League has been divided into two groups and during that space of time the Section II representative has failed to win a championship. South Hills has been a finalist in the post-season contest in seven out of the eight years, Oliver High winning the Section II crown once.

SCHENLEY FAVORITE

While Schenley is regarded a slight favorite today, South Hill has a better chance than ever of upsetting the dope, judging from the fine showing made by Coach Mazeski's gridders this season. The Tunnelites boast a smooth-working machine that presents a powerful line and a backfield that compares favorably with the best in the City League.

South Hills has played smart football all season and with Jimmy Firrell directing the attack, the Tunnelites will prove a real opponent for Coach Gross' Section I champions.

Schenley, a tie with Peabody marring its otherwise perfect Section I record, likewise has a powerful eleven. The Red and Black grid machine did not look too impressive in its final contest with Peabody, but Coaches Gross and Kelleher feel certain they have eradicated a lot of mistakes that cropped out in that game.

SCHOOLS INVITED

Members of all City League high school football teams as well as players on the championship soccer elevens will attend the game as guests of the two contesting schools. The records of the two finalists follow:

A varied list of high-class attractions are offered the scholastic fans in outlying districts today. The majority of the games bring together time-honored rivals.

Heading the schedule is the battle between Greensburg and Wilkinsburg. Both teams have suffered only one defeat and their contest today should prove a thriller.

Out at Duquesne, Clairton will make an effort to score its ninth straight victory against the only eleven that has defeated it in the last six years, while at Washington, the Little Presidents will wind up their seven-game schedule by engaging Monaca.

Braddock will be the scene of one of the several grudge battles when Braddock entertains Scott High, of North Braddock. The two schools have been rivals since 1923, splitting even in the eight games played to date. Braddock winning the first four and Scott the last four games.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Notre Dame's undefeated football players and the storming Trojans from Southern California turned anxious eyes toward the weather charts last night as the zero hour of their famous struggle of the gridiron approached.

ANDERSON WORRIED

Recalling his team's inability to get anywhere against Northwestern on a muddy field, Coach Heartly Anderson was worried, although his personal weather man, Prof. Hull, of Notre Dame, told him any snow would be limited to occasional flurries. The official weather man was not so optimistic, predicting that a snowstorm from Medicine Hat might strike the stadium at game time. Threat of snow or rain halted ticket sales at the 48,000 mark.

Both teams were confident and ready to throw in their first string lineups at the start, except for George Melinkovich, regular Notre Dame fullback, who may not get into the skirmish unless his successors, Steve Banas and Jimmy Leonard, are injured. The big Notre Dame fullback suffered a shoulder injury in the Navy game last week and he had not engaged in practice all week.

AID TO TROJANS

A wet field might be an advantage to the Trojans as it would handicap the Notre Dame passing

By HEARTLY W. (HUNK) ANDERSON,
Notre Dame Coach

If you can't have a football team that is a consistent winner, and you seldom do have one, give me the kind of a team that can come back after a reverse.

That's one of the reasons why I regard this week-end as the most critical in Notre Dame's football fortunes for the 1931 season.

Our team plays Southern California here at South Bend today, and Southern California is a team that has come back. It has come back from a beating sustained in its first game of the season to a point where it has to be classed as one of the strongest in the whole country.

Hunk Anderson

Southern California was off to an annoying start when it lost to St. Mary's.

Against a good many other teams that had national championship aspirations, that reverse might have caused the players to lose heart. Or if they didn't lose heart, some of the snap would go out of their play.

But not Southern California.

Coach Howard Jones' team has grown greater since that first defeat of the season than it might have become otherwise.

Not an opponent has been able to cross its goal line since St. Mary's did. There is no question in my mind but that Southern California now has its greatest team in history.

It has everything. Speed, power, versatility and sturdy defense.

Football players are prone to look at offense first. A team running up scores with regularity is the kind that appeals to a crowd. And in the scoring appeal, its ability to keep the other team from doing much advancing of the ball is generally forgotten.

DEFENSE IMPORTANT

When you are coaching a football team, you have to study an opponent's defensive qualities even more thoroughly than you do its offense.

Our reports on Southern California are that Jones has a defense to meet any sort of attack that is launched against his team. He has ample replacements, and he has no difficult task in keying his team for this game against Notre Dame. We regard the odds as all on his side.

Our own team played raggedly against Navy last Saturday. It lacked fire and it lacked aggressiveness. Our job this week has been one of trying to bring the boys back to the proper spirit for what I regard as the severest test of whatever we have in a football way that the season will develop.

PITT ONLY TOUGH FOE

So far this year, Notre Dame has engaged in only one hard game, and that isn't enough to toughen a team. The impossible conditons under which Northwestern was played kept that game from being any sort of a test, and neither team got much out of it. Pittsburgh was a tough game, and Pittsburgh was a tough team.

I think that Northwestern's erratic showing in its last two games can be traced to this same lack of hard play earlier in the year.

With one or two exceptions, our squad is in good physical trim for the encounter with Southern California.

We expect a battle all the way, and we are certain that Southern California looks for the same thing.

It will surprise me greatly if today's game does not develop into the most spectacular of the season.

We hope to win.

Beyond that, we have nothing to say.

BENEFIT DUCATS IN DEMAND

Keen interest already is being manifested in the benefit football game between Carnegie Tech and Duquesne University, to be played at the Stadium two weeks from today for the relief of the unemployed at Allegheny County. Both Buddy Overend, graduate athletic manager of Tech, and John D. Holohan, graduate manager of the Dukes, have received orders for tickets accompanied by cash, along with many inquiries.

It was announced today by the committee in charge that the scale of ticket prices, together with other information pertinent to the handling of the game, would be announced within the next few days.

COMMITTEES NAMED

Frank R. Phillips, general chairman of the game, has announced additional committee appointments, including Frank J. Lanahan, president of the Fort Pitt Malleable Iron Company and a prominent Pittsburgher, as a member of the general committee. Overend, as chairman of the program committee, and Holohan, as chairman of the arrangements committee.

The chairmen of the various committees also have announced their committee makeup.

Don Harrison, director of athletics of the University of Pittsburgh, serving as chairman of the ticket committee, has asked Dr. Benjamin G. Graham, superintendent of the Board of Public Education; A. T. Benson, Scout Executive of the Allegheny County Council of Boy Scouts of America, and Overend and Holohan to serve with him.

MANY TO HELP

W. H. Boyce, commercial manager of the Pittsburgh Railways Company and chairman of the transportation committee for the game, has asked John L. Houston, of the Yellow-Green Cab Company; Benjamin G. Marshall, assistant superintendent of police, and T. W. Noonan, general manager of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, to assist him.

CANZONERI BEATS CHOCOLATE IN THRILLER

DECISION CLOSE AS CHAMPION KEEPS TITLE

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The champion of the lightweights still is Tony Canzoneri, but just as surely the heir-apparent to the throne is Kid Chocolate.

Through 15 blistering rounds of unceasing action this pair of game-cocks fought in Madison Square Garden last night and by only the narrowest of margins did Canzoneri stave off Chocolate's formidable bid for his lightweight crown.

19,000 BOO DECISION

For this important duel a crowd of 19,000, largest at the Garden in two years, piled into the Eighth avenue arena, saw one of the most savage battles between little men in the modern history of the ring and remained for 10 minutes at the finish to boo the official decision.

So close was the milling that one judge, Charles F. Mathison, gave the verdict to Chocolate while the other judge, Joe Agnello, and the referee, Willie Lewis, cast their ballots for Canzoneri. The Associated Press scorecard listed eight rounds for Canzoneri, five for Chocolate, with the first and eighth even.

In Chocolate Tony found a foe ready and able to swap punches all the way over the long route. In the final analysis it was the fact that Canzoneri forced the fighting all the way that earned him the decision. In the face of a withering fire of lefts and rights, Tony walked into the Cuban Negro round after round, disdaining defense for a chance to sock away at Chocolate's slender sides.

KID BOXES WELL

At the end of 10 rounds it looked like Tony might lose his crown. Chocolate, boxing beautifully and punching accurately with both hands, had taken Canzoneri's best wallops without wincing and had partially closed both the champion's eyes with left jabs. But after that the unceasing fire Tony had been pouring into the Negro's body took its toll of the challenger's stamina and strength.

Through the last five rounds Canzoneri definitely held the upper hand. Canzoneri weighed 132 pounds. Chocolate 127½.

DUKES MEET N. DAKOTA

To date North Dakota has defeated Gustavus Adolphus, 46-0; St. Olaf, 22-0; DePaul, 21-0; South Dakota, 52-6; South Dakota State, 34-6; North Dakota State, 20-12; St. Thomas, 36-6, and Morningside, 44-0, and tied Oregon, 0-0.

The Dukes defeated Geneva 13-7, and Oglethorpe 6-0, and tied Western Maryland and Georgetown, 0-0, and lost to West Virginia, 6-14; Holy Cross, 0-12; West Virginia Wesleyan, 0-12, and Catholic University, 12-20.

PITT, TECH SCOUT

Seated in the stands will be the members of the Pitt and Tech varsity squads, on hand for a bit of scouting. The Tartans meet the Red and Blue in a charity game in the Pitt Stadium December 5, and the Panthers are looking forward to inaugurating gridiron relations with the Bluffites next fall.

The fullback situation is bothering the Duke coaches no little and is the big question of the day for Layden. With Zananelli in there, and in form, the locals can count on at least an even break in the kicking, no matter how well Richmond may be booting 'em. Zananelli, however, lacks speed and class on the offense, and it is for that reason that Cristina has been shifted. Layden spent many a tedious hour polishing his team's offensive for this game. Another setback hardly will enhance the local record.

Arrangements have been made for a special broadcast between halves of the Notre Dame-Southern California tussle. John Holohan, the Dukes' ambitious graduate manager, having rigged up amplifiers and a radio some way or other to give the cash customers a break on the biggest game of the day.

Lawless Wins Over Rose at New Castle

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 21.—Bucky Lawless, of Syracuse, was awarded the decision at the opening show at Castle Bowl, under the auspices of Apple Meyers, of Pittsburgh, after a slashing battle of 10 rounds with Billy Rose, of Cincinnati. Rose showed better form, but Lawless kept boring in all the time.

Frankie Stellmack, of Cleveland, and Bobby Stewart, Chicago, battled six rounds to a draw. Angelo Verglone, of Swissvale knocked out Eddie Flick, Oil City, in the third round.

Petey Jahn, of Pittsburgh, won the decision in six rounds over Bobby Rowe, of Pittsburgh. George Chip, of New Castle, was the referee.

stead and Munhall clashing in the eighteenth game of their long series. Although Homestead is the favorite, Munhall never fails to put up a strong fight against Bill Campbell's boys.

The First Pittsburgh-Turtle Creek game is another of those battles for blood. There is considerable feeling between the two elevens, more so than ever because Alex Waleski, former Turtle Creek player, who transferred to East Pittsburgh, has been ruled ineligible.

The headliner in the Chartiers Valley will be the McKees Rocks-Stowe Township battle at Stowe Township.

A number of games were played yesterday. Avalon High School's 6-0 victory over Bellevue, at Bellevue, marked the first time in eight years this borough has beaten its neighboring rival, and the result was the cause of considerable elation in Avalon.

Elizabeth High defeated Rankin, 6-0, and Oakmont tripped Millvale, 14-3. Crafton High bowed to Carnegie, 18-6, and Springdale walloped Pitcairn, 21-0.

South Fayette topped Avella, 18-12, and the Duke Preps met defeat at the hands of St. Mary of the Mount, 6-0. In other games, victories were turned in by Welch, Fairmont East, West Bethlehem, Rainelle, Anstead, Barnsville, Dillonville, East Pike Run, Somerset and Nitro.

attack, which has been unusually successful against the Trojans, who have gained most of their ground this season by a strong running attack. Coach Jones, however, insisted he was anxious to have a dry field for his backfield.

South Bend was jammed on the eve of the game. Hotels were crowded to capacity by celebrities from all fields, including movie stars from Hollywood. Two national broadcasting chains, National and Columbia, were ready to broadcast the game which starts at 1:30 p. m., Central Standard time. The radiocast is set for 1:15 p. m., Central Standard time.

NATIONAL CUP TIE TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

With the calling off of the Celtics-Castle Shannon game, fans have only one National amateur cup game, featuring the German Sport Club and the Shannon Juniors, and three Central League contests on tap for this afternoon.

The forfeiting of the Celtic game to Shannon has left a bad taste. It was thought all was not well within the Celtics Club ranks, but few of Lawrenceville fans figured that the Green and White could not raise a team.

Whether the team will finish the league schedule is another question. Harold Farmer is in charge, and he probably will clarify the situation soon.

The games between Westinghouse at Union Switch, and National Tube at Clan Douglas, are likely to appeal to the fans. Westinghouse played a great game at Sullivan Field against the Sport Club, and if that form again is flashed, the Switch men will have a real battle on their hands.

Clan Douglas probably will collect two points from National Tube. Manager Frank Mancher will present his team intact, and it is hardly possible McDonald and Craig will let the Tubers pierce Marshall's charge.

Mackey or Pitler May Pilot Scranton

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—No less than 11 men have applied for the job of managing the Scranton club, of the New York-Pennsylvania League, next season. Those seeking the berth are:

Leo Mackey, Cumberland pilot in 1931; Glenn Killinger, former Williamsport leader; Jakie Pitler, former Elmira and Hazleton manager; Bill McCorry, of Albany; Eddie Murphy and Charley Shorten, former big league outfielders; Elmer Smith, one-time Cleveland fly chaser; Bill Skiff, former American Association catcher; Ken Kirkham, Ernie Vick, who managed the local club during the greater part of last season, and Frank Dessau.

Leo Mackey, who is at his home here for the winter season, knows nothing of the report connecting his name as possible manager of the Scranton club, he said. It may be he will be selected through the good offices of the New York Yankees, who hold the Cumberland club, Mackey managed last year, as part of their farm chain.

All-Scholastic Teams Appear Tomorrow

If you are a follower of scholastic football, you won't want to miss tomorrow's issue of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph containing Julius Levin's all-Western Pennsylvania teams for the season, along with photos of all of the members of the first team.

The selections embrace the city high school teams, as well as those throughout the W. P. I. A. L.

SPORT VIGNETTES

The local chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America holds its annual meeting next Tuesday to elect officers for the ensuing year . . . . This scribe, having been named chairman of the publicity committee for the Carnegie Tech-Duquesne University benefit game for the unemployed at the Stadium, December 5, is now organizing a pep meeting for the boys . . . . All of the adjectives approved by the Publicity Directors' Local will be polished up for the occasion . . . . Incidentally, the free list will be entirely suspended for this game, even the scribes paying for their seats in the press box, with fines being assessed against those who stay away or come without ribbons in their typewriters . . . The players of both teams also will buy tickets.

There is almost as much speculation about whether Barry Wood will outshine his old rival, Albie Booth, or vice versa, as there is in the outcome of the Harvard-Yale game today . . . Wood, that "putrid person" (see your Husing), has had the edge in their three previous meetings as freshman and varsity players . . . Did you ever hear the story of the fellow who peeked into the fast-filling tank and announced, "Go ahead, it's only three-thirds full?"

A Joe Nolan memorial fund is being organized in Cincinnati to aid the widow and daughter of the late popular sports editor of that city . . . Coach Howard Jones, of Southern California, was teaching at Iowa in 1921 when Hunk Anderson, present Notre Dame coach, was playing as a guard on the Notre Dame team, and Iowa won, 10-7, to end a 20-game winning streak piled up by Knute Rockne, then the young coach of the Irish . . . Will he end the present longer winning streak in the game with the Notre Dame eleven coached by Anderson in their meeting at South Bend today? . . . The last time a Notre Dame team lost was to Southern California in 1928, by a 27-14 score . . . Notre Dame has lost only once in 27 years on its home field, and that was to Carnegie Tech, le, by the inspired Howard Harpster in 1928.

The oldest consecutive rivalry in American college football will be continued today when Lehigh and Lafayette meet again on Lehigh's field at Bethlehem, Pa. It will be their sixty-fifth clash . . . Lafayette has won 36 of the games so far played, against four ties and 24 defeats. . . . Lehigh won, 13-12, in 1929, for its first victory over its traditional foe since 1918, when it triumphed, 17-0, and during this period Lafayette has been coached by two former Pitt stars, Jock Sutherland, now the Panther mentor, and Herb McCracken, the incumbent, and the Leopards are favored to repeat in today's battle.

Lafayette has the best defensive record of any of the Eastern teams this fall, with only Colgate and Pennsylvania having been able to score against it . . . Colgate scored on two touchdowns and a safety and Pennsylvania on a field goal . . . The Maroon has not been scored upon in six home games.—HARRY KECK.

PITT, TARTANS SPLIT HONORS

The University of Pittsburgh and Carnegie Tech cross-country teams broke even in their annual varsity and yearling run, held over the Schenley Park course yesterday. Carnegie Tech's varsity won the senior event, 20 to 35, and, although it met defeat in the freshman competition, by the same score 20 to 35, Burke, Skibo plebe, established a new course record of 14:36 for the distance.

Burke's new record supplants that chalked up by Gus Moore, of Pitt, in 1927, when he was clocked at 14:47 2-5. Panther harriers placed second, third, fourth and fifth in the preliminary jog.

Jeff Trice, Wilbur Ramsay and Robert Schell, all Tartans, finished in a dead heat in the varsity run. Watkins, of Pitt, was fourth. The time of the leaders was 29:35.

Fight Results

GAMES TONIGHT

Windsor at Buffalo.
London at Cleveland.

By CARL W. SHATTO

Charley Reid, coach of the Yellow Jackets, will be on the lookout for a new center and a new right wing as the local International League hockey squad invades Detroit for a clash with the revamped and greatly strengthened Olympics tomorrow night.

The local icemen are to leave for the Auto City at midnight tonight.

CONSISTENCY LACKING

The Gregg-Holmes-Halliday combination was the only Pittsburgh front line able to penetrate the Buffalo defense with any degree of consistency, and it probably will be recognized as the No. 1 front line until such time as Coach Reid has additional talent at hand.

The Arbour-Rodden-Ingram line, recognized as the No. 1 attacking trio at the start of the campaign, has shown flashes of brilliance, but neither in consistency nor in stamina has it been able to match the Gregg-Holmes-Halliday combination.

The Jackets won seven out of eight games from Detroit last season, but they will find the 1931-32 Olympics an entirely different aggregation. George Hay, sterling wingman, who played the hero role many times when he was here with the Detroit National Leaguers, is the new player-manager of the Olympics, and he has used former National League talent very freely in rebuilding his club.

DETROIT STRONG

Evans and Rockburn, Detroit National Leaguers for several seasons, are the Olympics' new defense pair, and Hay and Sam McCabe, another former Falcon wing, have given the 1930-31 cellar champions a real scoring punch.

BULLDOGS BEAT STARS

WINDSOR, Ontario, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The Windsor Bulldogs defeated the Syracuse Stars, 6 to 4, last night in a free-scoring International Hockey League game. Windsor rolled up a three-goal lead in the first period, and added another in the fourth, then barely outlasted a Syracuse rush in the exciting third frame. The lineup:

Windsor—6		Syracuse—4
Kerr	G.	Miller
Arbour	R. D.	Hughes
Bellemer	L. D.	Trapnall
Haynes	C.	Howe
E. Roche	R. W.	Morris
K. Roche	L. W.	Martin

Windsor spares: Phillips, Lever, Hemberger, Sandstrom, Brown. Hoggins. Syracuse spares: Savage, McBride, Drouillard, Taddon, Waite. Boileroule, Palangio. Referee—LaSalmo and Findale. Summary: First period scoring: 1—Windsor, Phillips, 6:00; 2, Windsor, Arbour (Brown), 11:00; 3—Windsor, Haynes (D. Roche), 1:0. Penalties, Arbour E. Roche, Hughes, Trapnall, Hemberger, Savage, Bellemer. Second period scoring: 4—Windsor, Phillips, 8:10. Penalties Hoggins, Morris, Hemberger. Third period scoring: 5—Syracuse, Palangio (sharpe) 1:40; 6—Syracuse, Palangio, (2) 7—Syracuse, McBride, 3:40; 8, Windsor, Haynes (D. SUNDAY SUN-TELEGRAPH

Pursuit of Freedom Often Brings Unhappiness

Frank loves the girl.

Loves her so much that doing without her is playing hob with his eating and sleeping, and ruining his disposition . . . and he's sure she loves him!

Then what's wrong? Why doesn't he marry her? Is he ill? Out of a job? Broke? Does her family think he's a hunk of cheese?

No, stranger. It is none of these things. The truth is that he is just plain scared! Afraid of being "tied down" . . . afraid—

But here's the whole story in his own words.

"Dear Sally:

"I wonder if you can help me—as you've helped others. Briefly, the whole trouble seems to be that I don't know my own mind. I am 26, and I love a girl four years younger. I have known her since I was 6, and there has always been a lot of affection between us . . . but purely impersonal, like brother and sister. We grew up together.

Since we were first old enough to go to parties, I have taken her, although of course she had other friends. Never once have we had a harsh word, and I've always enjoyed doing little things for her. She trusts me implicitly. And she loves me. I'm not saying this out of conceit, but because I know it is true. Everything she does is for my approval.

"Now, in the last six months I have begun to feel differently about her. I want to be with her all of the time and, when I am near her, I want to grab her and run off with her. I long to kiss her, but I never have, except when she was going away somewhere.

AFRAID TO MARRY

"I love her so much that my work is suffering. I can't sleep or eat as I used to, and I am so nervous that my disposition is getting terrible.

"I know you will say, 'Well, why don't you marry her, then?' But—that is just what I don't want to do. I am afraid to. I don't want to be tied down, and I am afraid that I would make her life miserable.

"I don't know what to do. Can't you help me out?

"FRANK."

So you're afraid of being "tied down," in spite of the fact that you love her? Well, there's nothing strange or unusual about that, son. Most gents—'n' gals, too—have felt like that. And some of them have wrecked their lives because they did.

TIED DOWN BY LIFE

But now, before we go any further, let me ask you:

Aren't you "tied down" now? Tied down by your own misery and longing and frustration . . . Tied down by the plain, ornery cowardice that keeps you from being willing to pay for what you want?

Of course, you are. No matter how you may wiggle and scheme to achieve freedom, you'll never find it, son. Always you'll be tied by life itself . . . tied by your job . . . by the fact that you haven't the spunk to reach out for the paradise you'd like to have. Well, life won't give you gifts, any more than your boss gives you salary, unless you're willing to earn 'em!

And here's another point: Of course, you'll be giving up your freedom if you marry her. But so will she. Never thought of that, did you? If you do marry, neither of you will be able to do as you please always. . . . But if you love each other, you'll be getting something fine and rich and precious for your lost "freedom."

Which you get—happiness or misery—is up to you.

"THE THREE GRACES"

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

In the time when "She Stoops to Conquer" was written, young girls sang pensively while they twanged a harp, "Ah-h-hh me, when shall I marry me?"

Now they sing, just as pensively, "Ahhh me, whom shall I marry?"

When mob-caps, and tucked pinners were in vogue, patterns and bonnets, the pretty face was the same, but the little heart that beat beneath the tucker was more afraid of what "folks would say" than now. In the matter of sentimental things, "thirty" was getting along in years, and a maid should long have been married then. If she wasn't she was already a spinster; and because she couldn't get a man. Unless she could show a ring, a broken heart, ardent letters, and a marble tomb-stone in the church-yard on the hill, written upon it, "lost at sea, in the October gale." Ah, then, that was different. She had had her romance, and was not of the spinsters—SPINSTER.

"When" was the word then, and a girl worried if the seasons crept by, and Prince Charming didn't ride out of the outer world, or pop up in the world she already knew, her childhood playmate—transformed into the royalty of destiny. Even when you and I were young high-school fashion-plates, there was a good sprinkling of pretty girls who married upon that word "when," instead of "whom," far too soon, because they were afraid to linger in the delightful garden of girlhood too long. Today they tell me there are a few rare specimens of femininity left, who should know better, whose hearts go pit-a-pat every birthday. They say to themselves, "I might get left!"

But that's antiquated for woman, and a good and beautiful thing! Now, no woman, save that antique few just spoken of, marries through fear of being UNMARRIED. Her song now is, "AHHHH ME, WHOM SHALL I MARRY?" not "WHEN." The man is the pertinent thing—not the time. The right man, as he is easily called. The man she can love and like at the same time. A modern, old-fashioned man. If she is not in too big a hurry, there are plenty to be met on the road of romance.

The three graces sing now, pensively, and mean it, "WHOM shall I marry me!" And I like it better than "when."

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

To the Bridegroom

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young man my husband and I have known for a long time intends to be married soon. We would like to send a card of congratulations to this young man and his bride-to-be, but the trouble is that we have never met the girl. Will you please tell us what kind of card to send, how we should address it . . . I mean, to whom it should be addressed, and how should we sign our names?

PUZZLED.

I suggest that, instead of sending a card, you write a note of congratulations to the young man, telling him of your delight at the good news and of your wish for their happiness. In the note include your husband's wishes, too, of course . . . "John and I are so happy to hear of your engagement, and we want so much to have you know of our congratulations and our best wishes for your happiness always.

"Do tell your fiancee of our good wishes, too, to her, and of our anticipation of meeting her soon. John and I are so devoted to you that everything that concerns your life is important to us, and so of course we want very much to know your charming bride-to-be. May you and she and happiness walk always close together, Tom."

Sign your name to the letter, although obviously it will be from both you and your husband, and address the letter to the young man, although obviously, too, it will be a message of good wishes for both him and his fiancee.

Informal Christmas Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When I write my name on a Christmas card, should I write the Miss before my name?

CLARA.

Usually not. The point being that when you write your name on a Christmas card it means that the cards that you are sending are informal ones.

When we plan to send Christmas cards that we are to sign, it is apparent that the message on them will be informally worded. Probably something like this:

Wishing you
A Merry Christmas
and
A Happy New Year.

Under this informal message, you write your name, your informal name, without the title.

Or, maybe:

Merry Christmas
And Happy New Year,

Or:

Christmas Greetings
And wishes for
A Happy New Year,

To your very close friends, you would sign, probably, only your first name, if there would be no question of their not knowing which "Mary" it is. To those whom you know less well, you would sign your full name.

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Improving Partner's Bid

You "improve a bid" by shifting to a make requiring fewer tricks for game. Substituting a make better supported by the joint 26 cards of a side also improves the bid.

Much more than was the case at auction, contracting is now largely tentative, to disclose "hand patterns" (the number held of each suit declared), where commanding honors lie, and what make can best be played. Shifting from a minor to a major suit never denies strong support for partner's shift. Shifting from one suit to another of equal trick value (as from hearts to spades or from clubs to diamonds) only implies minimum support for partner's make, but, regardless of support for the original bid, the shift may offer a stronger suit. When reasonably possible any shift desires to hear further from the original bidder.

1 Spade
♠A-Q-10-6-3 ♥J-7-5 ♣K-J-6 ♦5-3

2 Diamonds
♠6 ♥8-5 ♣Q-10-8-5 ♦A-K-Q-J-7-4

The above takeout of 2-diamonds (one trick higher than necessary) is a demand bid, showing at least six probable tricks; requiring partner to respond by its announcement of game probabilities at some make—in this case at no-trump, clubs or diamonds.

Unless you can support partner's 1-No Trump upon something in excess of three honor tricks, it is better to pass unless your hand is not adapted to no-trump and contains a bidable suit. Minimum requirements for shifting partner's no-trump are either: (1) A suit worth 3 probable tricks, in a hand worth 4 tricks total, or (2) two suits, each worth 2½ probable tricks, in a hand worth 4 trick total.

4 Spades
♠K-Q-J-10-7-4 ♥4 ♣8-5-3 ♦A-9-7

2 Hearts
♠K-9-6 ♥K-J-10-8-2 ♣7-4 ♦9-6-3

2 Diamonds
♠5-4 ♥A-Q-6 ♣7-3 ♦Q-J-10-8-7-4

Pass
♠K-J-9-6-4 ♥10-5 ♣7-5-4 ♦9-7-6

3 No Trumps
♠J-7-4 ♥8-3 ♣A-K-Q-J-5-2 ♦10-6

Show both suits
♠K-10-6-4-3 ♥A-7 ♣9-8-7-4-3-2 ♦—

Bid and rebid Clubs
♠7-4 ♥5-2 ♣10-9-8-5-4-3-2 ♦8-4

The first of above hands is strong enough to go game with what partner's no-trump shows. The fourth hand is too weak to encourage further bidding by partner. A long solid minor suit justifies jumping to game at no-trumps, as done with the fifth hand. Unless your breath gives out before partner's, never let him play no-trumps when you hold the last hand shown above.

How to Keep Well

Investigate Severe and Lasting Abdominal Pains

In a medical survey recently made in Philadelphia, many interesting facts were brought to light concerning appendicitis. The statistics covering the clinical records of over 5,000 patients in 27 hospitals were carefully studied.

Dr. Copeland

It is hoped that out of this careful survey of figures and statistics, it may be possible to reduce the death rate in acute appendicitis. Diseases like typhoid, diphtheria and smallpox are growing remarkably less. There is no reason why a successful campaign cannot be waged against appendicitis.

In the early eighties, when appendicitis was first recognized as a distinctive disease, most sufferers were operated upon only after the appendix had ruptured. During the past fifty years this practice has greatly changed.

Forty per cent of the patients entering hospitals today give evidence of rupture of the appendix. This is unfortunate. When the appendix has actually ruptured, the recovery of the patient is made more stormy and difficult.

It is hoped the public will give greater regard to the seriousness of this disease. More attention should be given to it than we paid in the past. Dangers attached to the operation no longer exist as in the days when the disease was first known.

Many interesting and instructive facts are learned from this study. One of them is that the persons who suffer most from this disease are those who have taken laxatives prior to the operation.

Bear in mind that if you have pain in the abdomen nothing should be taken by the mouth. Certainly you should not take a laxative. Apply an ice bag to the abdomen and call your doctor.

Also remember that any abdominal pain that lasts for at least six hours demands expert opinion. Severe pains in the abdomen are signs of danger and you should at once consult your physician.

If you have had attacks of appendicitis and your physician has found the cause of the attacks and advised this operation, you need not hesitate to have it done. It is much wiser to walk into a hospital to be operated upon than be rushed in by an ambulance.

Household Hints

To whiten handkerchiefs which have become a bad color, soak them in a solution of pipeclay and warm water. Wash in the usual way.

Mix together one pint of linseed oil, half a pint of turpentine, and half a pint of vinegar. Wet a flannel with the mixture, and with it rub furniture. Let it remain on for half an hour before taking a soft, clean duster, and by vigorous rubbing polish the wood until it shines.

If you are doubtful about the purity of drinking water, the simplest way to test it is to draw a tumblerful at night, put a lump of sugar into it, and leave the glass in a warm room. If the water next morning is clear, then it is quite pure, but if it should appear cloudy or milky it is unfit for drinking.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Dicky's Jealousy Quickly Subsides in Wave of Contrition

It was not easy for me to manage a smile at Dicky when he made his amende honorable for his slighting reference to Hugh Grantland. Long ago he had promised me—of his own volition, I had exacted no pledge—that he never again would use the outrageous appellation "Faithful Fido," which in the days of our first association with the army officer had been on his lips with sneering frequency. With but one or two lapses, he had kept that word, for beneath his unreasoning jealousy, he realized the great debt all of us owed Hugh. He could not forget the rescue of Junior from the kidnaper employed by Grace Draper years ago, nor, more recently, the manner in which Hugh had thwarted the last diabolical plot of that implacable woman whose suicide had followed close upon our discovery of her identity.

But every time Dicky has uttered that sneering reference to the best and most faithful friend except Lillian whom I ever have had, I have had almost the same reaction to the words as I would have had if he had slapped me. I knew well enough that the primitive impulse to deal a blow was behind the words, that he uttered them only because his code and training prevented anything more violent.

But I defy anyone to resist Dicky when he is in one of his royally apologetic moods. His infectious smile, his really sincere contrition would thaw the frost from the window panes upon a zero morning. It would take a more sullen nature than mine to keep up resentment toward him when he chooses to exert his powers in staging remorse for his rudeness. I was glad, however, that my weakness from the swoon was an excuse for my silence. I could smile at him, but for the moment I could not speak.

But Lillian, as always, when I need her aid, was sufficiently vocal for both of us.

"All right, Lad," she said, looking fixedly at him. "You saved your bacon that time, but please see that you refrain from those quaint little pleasantries for the next few weeks. As you have just so sapiently remarked, we evidently have a scrap, or scrape—in fact both, on our hands. We can't waste any time, or breath in fool remarks. Now, Madge," briskly, "let's go back to the place where we were switched off the track. You're sure that the characters upon the outside of this paper are those of Lee Chow's name?"

"Yes, I'm positive of that," I returned quietly.

"Then," Lillian's voice was decisive now, and in its crispness I detected a hint of more excitement than she usually permits herself. "Someone of of the Chinese, loyal to Lee Chow, knows that he is alive, and that he is on his way here, and has taken this outlandish method of getting in touch with him. Why!"—her eyes leaped to mine and held them—"he and Hugh may be very near."

"Not necessarily." My father's voice broke in with authority in its steady tones. "But that Lee Chow—at least—is alive and headed toward here, I think we may safely deduce. But that his return is imminent—we may not hope for that on this evidence alone. The Chinese are very patient, remember. Time does not mean to them what it does to us."

I heard his words, and noted them subconsciously, for I remembered them later. But while he was speaking all my faculties were centered upon two words—"at least" and the slight hesitancy which had been his after the utterance of Lee Chow's name. What dread lay behind that hesitancy? Did he fear that Lee Chow might be coming to us to tell us that Hugh——?

Lillian gave a little choking cough—a most naturalistic performance. Only I knew that it was one of our private signals which meant "Watch your step." With her uncanny prescience she had realized my interpretation of my father's hesitancy, and was warning me not to give Dicky fresh cause for jealousy of the man whose very name excites his unreasoning anger.

"Some of 'em aren't particularly patient when they've got something in mind that they want," she commented. "This lad who wanted that letter from Madge, for instance, he wasn't doing any masculine double for our dear old childhood friend, Griselda. He was a regular go-getter, that lad. By the way, what is Mr. Ticer's report on him?"

"That he carefully obeyed Madge's direction to pull up every fourth cornstalk, lift it up and let it fall to the ground," Dicky said. "When he reached the other end of the last row, Mr. Ticer wasn't able to see what he did. But he isn't headed back through the Ticer cornfield, that's one sure thing. Sam Ticer has the keenest eyes of anybody I know, and he's hunted through this section since he was born. He's sitting out there with his shotgun ready, and he'll know when that beast is anywhere near. But—I wish you hadn't thought it necessary to let him go, Madge. I'd have liked the job of strangling him."

I knew what was behind Dicky's words, the horrible suspicion of what the man might have carried in the hand he had kept behind him, and the reference he had made to my having too "plitty" a face to spoil. It was his love for me which was behind the criticism—if, indeed, that were not too strong a word for his suggestion. But I was so exhausted in nerves and body that I caught only the reproach, as I fancied it, and to my horror, I could not utter intelligibly the words of explanation which crowded to my lips, but instead broke into convulsive sobs.

Want to Look Young?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to set on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When hair is dry and brittle, rub oil into the scalp. Mineral oil will do, or vaseline, or castor oil thinned with alcohol.

Knees and elbows are not blessed with beauty. Skin on the hinges of the body is usually goose-fleshy and discolored. By frictioning once a day with cocoa butter, the surface will whiten and the cutaneous covering take on a more presentable appearance.

When feet are hot and tired bathe them with cold water and apply a powder made of one tablespoonful of powdered boric acid and five tablespoonfuls of powdered talcum. Corns are caused by pressure of the shoes. As long as pressure is there, the corn will be there to make life a twinging misery . . . A blister on the heel should be protected with a small, thin corn plaster until it has healed completely.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The other night several prominent members of the Hollywood fields talked on the unemployment program. It was a revelation in personality and showmanship. Those possessed of the most striking personalities, the greatest sense of showmanship managed not only to capture their audience but to hold it.

The remainder could not hold it because either they were colorless or they lacked any sense of showmanship, or, worse yet, they had nothing to say. The net result in the parlors was a blend of indifference and attentiveness, with the balance in favor of indifference, that could not have fulfilled the purpose that the sponsors had planned.

* * *

However, there were three speakers who managed to be different, to stand out from their fellows. The three were Lionel Barrymore, George Arliss, Marie Dressler. Veteran troupers, all, they came to the microphone with a show of the art that conceals art. They rid themselves, happily, of pompousness of sob sister extraction, talked easily and naturally and sat down.

Barrymore, especially, displayed a fine speaking voice, a conversational manner, a radio ease that could make of him a welcome figure on the microphone should the call ever come.

* * *

The Hollywood part of the show began with Conrad Nagel, too conscious of the responsibility that was his as master of ceremonies and ended with the M. Chevalier gagging in his familiar manner over a Frenchman's idea of American slang. In between was a speech by Will Hays, who devoted an excellent speaking voice to airing the same line of thought that has been dinned repeatedly into the public ear.

Radio personality is an elusive quality. Such an elusive quality! People you would most expect to show it somehow don't. A voice and a face that register well in the talkies often fall flat on the microphones even when it comes to speaking—or singing—for unemployment relief.

For that reason, if such relief is to occupy a large part of broadcasting time, it would seem best that the appeals be concentrated in people who known their radio onions.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

REV. JOHN SPROUL'S attempt to regain the license of WWSW, for his old station, WMBJ, has failed the Federal Radio Commission dismissed his case late yesterday.

Harold V. Martin

Peevey Boyd's active interest in special broadcasts to the Arctic Circle have brought him the Penicker Father Par north. One of our most popular local entertainers has a diamond ring for somebody.

The license of Joseph A. Spinneweber, Pittsburgh radio amateur, WSDRA, was revoked today because he was allowed to have interfered with broadcast signals in the South Hills area. 25,657 artists parading before NBC microphones in the month ending November 15.

Question a Day:

Is there any limit to the amount of advertising a radio station may put on the air?—George K. B. Greentree Boro.

Answer—We suppose you mean the proportion of advertising. Yes. The Federal Radio Commission, while establishing no definite bounds, has expressed a desire that radio stations refrain from using more than 60 per cent of their time for commercial programs; the remaining 40 per cent to be devoted to sustaining or educational features.

The pre-eminent choice of music lovers tonight is the Philadelphia Symphony concert on CBS-WJAS at 8:15 presenting representative works by Christoph Gluck, son of an Austrian forester and the first great German operatist; "Papa" Haydn, father of the symphony, and Mozart and Beethoven, who expressed in a way that has never been equaled the greatness of the human soul.

Studio Lights:

Henry Busse who resembles Paul Whiteman so much that he could cash his check, has been summoned by Walter Winchell to take part in the Andy Sannella concert on WCAE at 10 o'clock tonight. Busse's Orchestra is to be picked up from New Orleans.

The Gene and Glenn Song Shop with its proverbial cash register and other grotesque features is back on WTAM at midnight every Saturday.

A young Brackenridge gridder who signs himself "The Quarterback" informs us that his team lost an important game last Saturday because a local station canceled a noon feature that always furnished his players with relaxation before the whistle . . . it was a dance program.

Clever, this letter from a Mt. Lebanon girl, who identifies the juvenile actor with Riggs and Moke as Myth (Miss) Betty.

When Gene Rowell of "Gene and Glenn" celebrated his thirty-first birthday last week, WTAM received two mailbags of birthday cards, a crate of apples and 61 boxes of candy.

Paul Althouse, tenor, sings an aria from "Aida" on WJZ at 9 o'clock tonight in a broadcast direct from the stage of Chicago Civic Opera Company . . .

"When Day Is Done" was judged more of a 6 o'clock greeting than a midnight signature, so Ann Leaf has changed her "Nocturne" welcome to "Song of the Midnight," a new piece about to be published . . .

What a class that must have been in Los Angeles years ago when Ferde Grofe, Rudy Wiedoeft and Paul Van Loan played daily for the kids to march into school . . . Rudy beat the triangle, Ferde played the piano and Paul tooted the cornet . . .

Today's Tid Bit:

Orville Andrews, vocalist with Jimmy Joy, writes us that there will be a lot of cutups in St. Paul next week for the Surgeons' convention.

HARVARD, YALE CLASH

CRIMSON RATED FAVORITE OVER BLUE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The Golden Jubilee of intercollegiate football's outstanding rivalry will be fittingly observed in the Stadium today when Harvard's undefeated eleven attempts to round out its first perfect season since 1913, by smearing the great Albie Booth and his Yale cohorts for the fourth successive year.

Both teams are in prime shape for this gridiron epic. Yale, with a three weeks respite from rugged competition, comes up to its objective with only one important casualty, Vic Malin, center, who was injured in the sensational 33-33 deadlock with Dartmouth. Harvard, forced to grind against powerful opposition since early in October, is at full strength.

It is likely that Harvard will open a slight favorite since its line, especially at the tackles, is considered to be much stronger than that of the Elis. Harvard's line replacements are also rated higher than Yale's. The probable lineups:

Harvard.		Yale
Nazro	LE	Filgare
Hardy	LT	Wilbur
Gilman	LG	Nichols
Hallowell	C	Reiner
Mierson	RG	Bolan
Kupas	RT	Hall
Hagerman	RE	Barnes
Dowd (C.)	QB	Farace
Crickard	LH	(C.) Boot
Schierenbrandt	RH	Crowley
White	F	Levering

Officials: Referee, W. G. Crowell, Swarthmore; umpire, C. J. McCarthy, Philadelphia; linesman, H. A. Fisher, Columbia; field judge, B. E. Miller, Penn State.

NEW GOLF BALL GETS O. K.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The final chapter in the ill-fated career of the balloon golf ball has been written by the executive committee of the United States Golf Association.

On January 1, 1932, the overgrown and underweight sphere that has had the nation's linksmen running a fever for the last year will vanish officially from the fairways.

Replacing it will be a new creation that the golfing fathers fondly believe is everything a golf ball should be, combining as it does the best features of the old pellet and the balloonet, the weight of the old and the size of the new.

"Effective for play January 1, 1932, the size of the golf ball shall be not less than 1.68 inches in diameter, and the weight shall be not greater than 1.62 ounces avoirdupois."

It is known the U. S. G. A. entertains high hopes that the Royal and Ancient Golf Club, of St. Andrew's, the game's ruling body in England, will adopt the new ball.

A. A. U. CONFAB CARDED

The registration committee of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the A. A. U. will meet at the new headquarters of the association, room 37, Vandergrift Building, at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

CERNEY INVITED

The Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U. senior marathon champion, Frank Cerney, has been invited to participate in the annual Berwick marathon on Thanksgiving Day. He and other local Pedibers are likely to accept.

Between Rounds

Young Rudy, of Charleroi, who beats Johnny Cooper, of Cincinnati, in one of the two eight-round bouts on the George Fanka-Tony Gazento card at Motor Square Garden Monday night, also has been matched by his manager, Al Butler, for a windup with Marty McHale, of McKeesport, at Weirton, W. Va., next Saturday night.

Nick Ellenwood, of Indianapolis, will take the place of Mickey Dora in the 10-round main bout at Johnstown Monday night, Dora having been barred for boxing outside the state before honoring an earlier date against Brannon at Johnstown.

A benefit boxing show under the auspices of the Twelfth Ward Unemployment Association, associated with the Twelfth Ward Regular Republican Organization, will be held in Motor Square Garden on Friday night, December 11. Jimmy Belmont and Moe Hutch will appear in exhibition feature bouts, with 10 amateur battles also listed.

The following amateur boxing shows have been sanctioned by the Allegheny Association of the A. A. U.: November 21, Somerset and Ambridge; November 23, Sharon; November 24, Beaver Falls and Keystone A. C.; December 2-3, Western Pennsylvania amateur championship tournament, McKeesport; December 3, Beaver Falls; December 7, Pittsburgh-boxers in Buffalo; December 8, Pittsburgh A. C. boxers at Buffalo; December 14, Beaver Falls; December 15, Ambridge; December 23, Community benefit, Ambridge; December 25, Beaver Falls.

Andy Callahan brings a hand in his bout with Sammy Fuller in Boston last Monday night, and Bucky Lawless, of Syracuse, will take his place against Lou Brouillard, the welterweight champion, in a 10-round non-title bout there next Friday night.

MUSCULAR-RHEUMATIC PAINS

DRAW them out with a "counter-irritant." Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness—generally respond to good old Musterole. Doctors call it a "counter-irritant" because its warming action penetrates and stimulates blood circulation and helps to draw out infection and pain. It gets action and is not just a salve. But do not stop with one application. Apply this soothing, cooling, healing ointment generously to the affected area once every hour for five hours. Used by millions for over 20 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

PENNSYLVANIA MAY REINSTATE CARNERA

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera's reinstatement in Pennsylvania for a bout with Tommy Loughran here next month shall hinge on an opinion of Attorney General William A. Schnader.

The State Athletic Commission agreed to revoke the Italian's suspension and sanction the proposed bout on condition that the promoters guarantee a complete refund to ticket purchasers if the bout proves unsatisfactory to the commission.

AWAIT RULING

The promoters agreed to the condition, but Commissioner Havey Boyle, of Pittsburgh, ruled the commission's formal sanction must await a decision by the Attorney General that such an arrangement would stand up in court. He said he might get the ruling by next Friday, when the commission is to meet again.

The commission for the third time refused to license Benny Leonard, holding that the former lightweight champion, who is attempting a comeback still has to prove his ability by fights in other states. It also suspended indefinitely because of unsatisfactory services at McKeesport, Pa., Harry Lennox, of Zihlman, Md., and Cleo McNeil, Canton, O.

PRIMO POSTS BOND

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera, Italian heavyweight, is en route to New York after furnishing a $4,000 bond in connection with a judgment for $3,754 against him obtained by George Biemer, Fort Wayne, Ind., promoter. Carnera was taken in custody after his bout with King Levinsky, in the Chicago Stadium.

The judgment was obtained two years ago by Biemer, who claimed Carnera had failed to fulfill a boxing engagement, causing him financial loss to the amount of the judgment. Carnera's attorneys asked to have the judgment quashed, arguing that it was illegally issued, because no evidence of fraud was shown.

Judge Lindsay denied the petition on the ground that Carnera transferred his purse for his fight with King Levinsky to the Chicago Stadium Corporation, which, the court held, constituted fraud.

Gridder Passes Up $5,000 to Play Against Navy

DALLAS, Tex., Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Bob Gilbert, star quarterback and chief passer for the Southern Methodist Mustangs, turned down an offer of $5,000 in order to play in the game today between the Mustangs and Navy at Annapolis.

Gilbert, who was injured last month and forced to remain on the sidelines for six weeks, was offered anything up to $5,000 by his parents provided he would not play in any of the three remaining games on the schedule of S. M. U.

This is young Gilbert's last year in S. M. U., and he stated he would rather play in the Methodist-Navy game than to receive a much larger sum than $5,000.

Indians to Play Charity Tilt Today

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Oglethorpe University, of Atlanta, Ga., and Haskell Indians will meet on Soldier Field today in a football game, the receipts of which will go to the disabled American Veterans of the World War.

The Indians, under the direction of William (Lone Star) Dietz, former Carlisle Indian star, have compiled a good record this season, numbering among their victims Kansas University. The ace of the Redskin eleven is Louie (Little Rabbit) Weller, a running and passing halfback.

NORTHWESTERN MEETS IOWA TODAY

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Northwestern's undefeated Wildcats have a chance to move another notch closer to the undisputed Western Conference gridiron championship today in engaging Iowa City, leaving only Purdue to be conquered a week later to wind up with an unmarred record.

Today's games would have wound up the 1931 season in the Big Ten, but along came the depression, bringing charity in its wake, and another week was added to the schedule, forcing the Wildcats to take on Purdue in Soldier Field here and beat the Boilermakers before they can call themselves champions.

Every team in the Big Ten will be in conference competition today with Minnesota's invasion of Michigan standing out as the game that promises to produce the best battle.

Every contest, with one exception, involves long time rivalry and defense on jugs, buckets and other trophies. The Old Oaken Bucket goes to the winner of the Purdue-Indiana battle at Bloomington, while Illinois and Ohio State will battle for another symbol of victory at Columbus, a wooden turle named "Illibuck." The Little Brown Jug will be at stake in the Minnesota-Wolverines conflict at Ann Arbor. Wisconsin moves to Stagg Field for a game with the Maroons, with no time-honored trophy at stake.

MANNING SNARES ACE

Charley Manning, Shannopin Country Club's professional, scored his eighth hole in one yesterday when he dropped a No. 4 iron shot to the cup on the 165-yard fourteenth hole. He was playing with President J. A. Hubach, J. L. Rodrigues and J. Lang Hukill. Dr. H. was Manning's first ace in the six years he has been at the Western Pennsylvania club. His ace gave him a 39 for six under par for the last nine holes, and a full round card of 69.

The SUN-TELEGRAPH
DOLL LADY

Sends This Friendly Warning to Every Little Girl in Pittsburgh and Vicinity. She Has a Great, Big Doll House Full of

"HONEYBUNCHES"

Dear Little Girls:—

Every girl who has sent me a letter has received in return a fine picture in colors of my new "Honeybunch" dolly. I only wish that I could see these little girls when they get that picture which shows "Honeybunch" doing many of the cute things she really does and also illustrates her beautiful clothes in colors. I'd like to watch the expression on their faces as they get their first look at this glorious doll and hear just what they say.

"Honeybunch," you know, is DIFFERENT from other dolls. She's made expressly for me and she cannot be purchased in any of the stores. She's a marvelous doll in every way. She's dressed in a fine quality of dainty organdy, lace trimmed. She has a lace cap tied with ribbons to match, and has shoes and stockings in the same colors. "Honeybunch" has unbreakable rubber arms and hands, has a charming voice, uses a pacifier and has cute rubber panties.

This Is "Honeybunch"—Isn't She a Darling?

Fortunately, there will be no disappointments this year, as I have a doll house crammed full of "Honeybunches," all waiting to get into the arms and homes of the little girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity. Of course, you want a "Honeybunch" and you'll want her before Christmas. Fill in the coupon in this announcement, send it to me today, and I'll write right back to you, telling how easy it will be to get this marvelous big doll. And I'll send you one of those colored pictures.

A Story of Modern Homes And Unbridled Youth

CHAPTER III.

Foggy drew Laurel into the dilapidated room of the deserted mansion. The air was thick with smoke of cigarets . . . someone was strumming on a uke . . . there was a babel of voices and clink of glasses.

"My petty-wetty boo-ful one, leaving lickle Im alone . . ." she gurgled. She had mixed Scotch with champagne in the last 15 minutes and already she was feeling muddled.

"I won't. I'm in love. Forget Laurel!"

"Don't be a silly little fool."

"You won't. You'll sit in a corner here with me. And if you make any trouble I'll ditch you."

She was about to snivel over this harsh dictum, but the ukulele player burst into a Charleston. — Imogen thought better of it, and leapt to the center of the floor, ready to "strut her stuff."

"Go to it, Im!"

She had admirers and enemies among the crowd, but having captured the limelight now Imogen was impervious to both.

She could clog and cut the pigeon wing in a way to make every other female green with envy.

"Attagirl."

"Hot tamale."

"Ain't she a pippin?"

"Whoops, dearie!"

IM GIVES WARNING

"I was thinking if a storm came up outside and the heavens opened and hit us with brimstone—"

"And out of the cupboards or down the chimney rushed the famous ghost and joined Im in the Charleston!" Roger had come up behind them and finished her sentence.

"I've invented a new one that's a wow," responded Foggy enthusiastically. "It's sweet and goes to the head like holy smoke! I've christened it 'The Old Maid's Downfall.'"

The solo dance came to an end on a round of applause and one last high kick from Imogen. She came directly over to them.

"You keep off Roger, old thing! He's mine," she stuttered to Laurel. She pushed Roger down on an empty packing case with a swift movement, perched herself on the knee of the somewhat annoyed young man. "Don't poach, you Laurel woman!" she hiccuped, "and as for you, Roger, old pet, if you neck with her again I'll take you by the neck and cut off your head and dance with it in my hands, like, like Salome!"

"Bravo!"

"Go to it!"

FRIGHT LEAVES LAUREL

Foggy returned with Laurel's cocktail. "To your downfall, darling!" He waved a brimming glass.

"What's in it? Dynamite or poison?"

"No. You'll land softer! It's grand stuff!"

"Another one? Come on! I've got a shakerful!"

She drank again and then again. She danced with Foggy, then with Roger.

Delilah was a lady of the long ago who cut off a strong man's hair, and in revenge he pulled a whole temple down on her, didn't he?

Stupid to be strait-laced when even her own mother, in that wonderful decollete frock, was tonight gadding . . .

STRUCK WITH GLASS

"Heh! Loosen up a little, Samson."

"What?"

"The strangle-hold! The long close clinch! You're squeezing the breath out of me . . ."

Then something crashed . . . a glass of Scotch hurled directly at the pair by Imogen . . . ! It hit Laurel on the head and broke, but the cut was luckily only slight, because her hair formed a thick covering . . .

Immediately there was an uproar and the music stopped.

"God! Are you hurt? That tiger-cat! She'll pay—" choked Roger.

"It was you I meant to hit, you cad!" screamed Imogen hysterically.

"I'm all right. Don't fuss . . ." said Laurel faintly as Roger whipped out a handkerchief and began stanching the scalp wound. But what with the drinks and the shock, the room seemed to be turning round and round.

Brimstone from heaven? They'd earned it, all of them! Oh! what was that at the window? . . . Was the ghost rising from its grave and joining in?

They opened the door, and Laurel, terrified of she knew not what, dizzy from the shock, the heat, the drinks, broke away from them and ran.

Were the pack after her like wolves? Im to have flung that glass at her because of Roger? She had admired Im so! had looked on her as a sort of oracle.

TIRES CUT

She lurched a little as she ran. Tripped twice on the uneven ground. The apparition that had scared her so at the window of the house . . . was it the ghost . . . some vengeful spirit?

She heard voices call, but in her distraught state the sound only lent wings to her feet.

Her car! Get in it, quick—and off! Feel the purifying air of heaven blow on her!

She reached the parked roadster. With fingers that were almost steady because of her anxiety to be away, she unlocked it, started the engine, let in the clutch, pressed her foot on the accelerator. There was no response beyond a queer little violent skid on the gravel!

What on earth had happened?

She tried again. The wheels sought to revolve . . . making a dismal sound. The machine jerked a foot or two forward.

"God! Someone has slit them through and through!"

The grounds seemed full of leering, shadowy faces! Those faces didn't want her to go home! They knew further terror awaited her . . . wanted to witness her destruction . . .!

The potent drinks—now she was in the open air—had doubly mounted to her head. Laurel like a trapped animal, stared shudderingly about her. Then—at sight of a white-clad figure that was racing and leaping toward her—she gave a wild scream! God! what was it? Man or beast or spirit?

As Laurel swayed against him, he realized that she had been drinking.

ASKS STRANGER'S AID

* * *

It seemed to her as though she'd raced for hours, her breath choking her, her heart thundering till it was nigh to bursting . . .

A car had drawn up in the road in front of her, and out of it had jumped a man.

He was in evening clothes and wore no hat. Dizzy and frantic as she was, Laurel vaguely took in the fact that he was young and good-looking.

This reckless age! Those whoopie flappers paid in every kind of way for their mad gaiety! And this one so young and pretty. Oh, the pity of it!

"Who? What?"

"The ghost whom we insulted!"

She grabbed his arm and held it as if in a vise. "Quick! Hide me! Get me into the machine . . ."

LAUREL EXPLAINS

As she swayed against him he felt her breath quite close . . . she had been drinking.

But the blood? In this crazed condition had the girl murdered anybody? Or had she herself been attacked by, and now fled from, some ruffian? In his profession he was prepared for anything.

"Pull yourself together and tell me what happened and I'll do what I can to help you," he said in a voice that was purposely matter-of-fact.

She murmured: "Gashed through and through—!" and then broke into a high, hysterical laugh.

"Stop it at once!" His voice was brusque and authoritative. "Quit making that noise, and explain yourself!"

Synopsis

Laurel Oakes, 19, thoroughly "modern," finds that she will be alone at dinner. She flirts with Roger Sartoris, 29, blase, jaded young man who is infatuated with her. Imogene Gay invites Laurel to a "moonlight party." Laurel drives her roadster out to a deserted farm house where she finds many of her friends intoxicated, having a gay time.

Now Go On

"Ha! Ha! Ho! Ho!"

"You cut that out or I'll drive off and leave you."

"Then pull yourself together and tell me if you're hurt, or if anybody's hurt? I happen to be a doctor . . . "

"N-nobody's hurt at all. Except Imogen threw a glass of drink at me . . . and then . . . and then a ghost chased me right through the garden . . ."

"And what is it that was 'gashed through and through,' as you just said?"

"The tires . . . of my roadster."

"So you were at a party, were you?"

"Yeah. In a deserted house 'way over there?" She made a vague movement with her hand. "What house?"

"They call it 'Runner's Rest.' It's abandoned."

"That spooky place? A party there?"

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

This morning at 13 Warner Theaters in the Pittsburgh district, the Prince Theater, Ambridge, and the State Theater, Washington, and the Memorial, McKeesport, thousands of children attended the Warner Theaters-Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club meetings.

When the club chapters were organized a Grand Jester and Board of Governors was elected in each chapter. These members have now nearly finished their terms, and at the meeting next Saturday new officers will be elected. The new officers will serve four weeks.

DUTIES OF OFFICERS

The officers of each chapter take their places on the stage at every meeting. They read the club pledge, which is repeated by the members. The meetings open with patriotic exercises and at many chapters the Boy and Girl Scouts take a prominent part in the program.

Members of Rowland and Enright Chapters had the pleasure, today, of meeting Uncle Kay Dee, the popular radio character, who goes on the air every evening at 5 o'clock just to amuse the little ones. Next week Uncle Kay Dee will visit the Harris (Downtown) and the Kenyon, North Side, chapters. At later dates he will appear at the rest of the chapter meetings.

Tampa, the internationally known magician is making a tour of the chapters too. Tampa will appear today at the Cameraphone, East Liberty. If he has not visited your chapter yet, be patient for he is on the way and you will see him very soon.

CONTESTS AND PRIZES

There were contests with attractive prizes and door prizes at every chapter meeting today. The stage programs at each chapter meeting was made up of talented children who belong to the club. The Mt. Oliver Harris is planning a big revue and the children who have made the best showing at the chapter meetings will be the principal features.

It is surprising the amount of musical talent that has been discovered in the Warner Theaters-Sun Telegraph Junior Komic Club. Several of the chapters have organized orchestras, notably the Cameraphone, East Liberty.

One of the most attractive parts of the Junior Komic Club meetings is that the managers of each chapter plan surprises for every Saturday morning. There is always lots of fun, and once you join the club you will not want to miss a meeting. If you have not already joined, go to your neighborhood theater next Saturday morning and fill out an application blank. The manager will give you your club card and button.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Arsenal—Cecelle Grzyeac, Jane Zblit, Thomas Devine.
Cameraphone—Jack Pringle.
Kenyon—Bernard Spilecki.
Manor—Howard Gross, Leonard Radseph, Evelyn Cain, Philip Dutch.
Rowland—Virginia Irwin.
South Hills Harris—Carolyn Barbour, Fred Rush.
Schenley—Burtan Schwartz, Irene Pearlman.

LOVE COMES BUT ONCE

(Or, Tarzan at College)

Synopsis — If you haven't enough interest in this novel to remember the plot we don't see why we should bother to write it. In fact, we are beginning to be sorry we ever started it. Now go on with the story.

All the audience of the Yuba-Tuba Big Game were roused out of their beds at 3 o'clock in the morning. "The teams have agreed to finish the game," said the telephone operator, and for the rest of the night there was merry-making and revelry in mansion and cottage. The result of this was that everyone slept late the next day and the gripping last quarter was played to an empty stadium. Lucy Mulch had taken the place of the coach, who had become disgusted and gone back into the hardware business. "Lucy, you are a jim dandy coach," said Freemantle Gadwall admiringly. "Especially in the huddles." Lucy glowed like a lamp. "I do but my best," she whispered shyly. "Win—for me." And with a cry of triumph Gadwall dashed away. But at that very moment—

Beware the Aftermath!

People are not contributing to the Welfare and Emergency Association Fund as they should. It is to be feared the slackers are short-sighted. A good deal more is involved in this campaign than the immediate relief of distress. Even if the social service agencies are unable to carry on because of lack of money, the army of the destitute may manage to worry through somehow—by panhandling and by living in improvised shacks. But what of the future?

*Along the river banks and on other tracts of un-*occupied land around Pittsburgh colonies of shanties have sprung up within the last year. The shanty dwellers eke out some sort of existence by begging and by picking up decayed food in the produce yards and markets. Hoboes' jungles. Yes; but not a few of these hoboes were men of settled lives until recently.

There is real danger that if these hoboes are forced to continue to live this sort of life, and if their numbers are increased because of the failure of the Welfare and Emergency campaign, their habits will be permanently unsettled and even after the return of prosperity they will continue to be hoboes. A year or two of vagrancy will unfit many for steady jobs when jobs are available.

Some of the denizens of our hobo jungles are men with families whom they have quitted because they were unable to support them. If they should become professional hoboes their families may never see them again. Furthermore it is but a short step from vagrancy to petty thieving. And petty thieving leads to worse. Thought must be given, in fine, to the probability that from the ranks of the unemployed of weak character the ranks of criminals will be swelled.

The evil effects of war are felt for years after the armies are demobilized. A long period of severe economic depression will also be attended with evil consequences unless people of means and vision prevent them. The people of this community can help to prevent them by giving the Welfare Fund and the Emergency Association the $6,000,000 that they need to provide jobs on the public works and keep families together and preserve the morale of the destitute.

Failure of the Welfare and Emergency campaign to reach its goal will be seized upon as an additional reason why Gov. Pinchot's legislative program for unemployment relief should be passed. The program calls for nuisance taxes on cigarets and gasoline, which will fall hardest on people in dest circumstances. But the rich probably will have to pay through a state income tax.

Dr. C. B. Maits, director of public health, warns tha. poverty makes it easier for tuberculosis to gain a foothold. And the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh furnishes a timely reminder, in a display of Christmas seals in the library of Carnegie Institute, that these stamps are bullets in the warfare against the great white plague. Use them in sending Christmas cards.

An encouraging feature of the movement to aid the unemployed is the spirit of helpfulness shown by public entertainers who are contributing their services without charge to benefit performances. It is announced, for instance, that 25 acts of vaudeville will be furnished for the show in Moose Temple Tuesday night for the benefit of Father Cox's breadline and the dwellers in Shantytown.

The alacrity with which the teams of Carnegie Tech and Duquesne University have responded to the call to play a football game at the Stadium on December 5 for the benefit of the needy is commendable. Now it is up to the public to show appreciation by attending the game, which undoubtedly will be well worth seeing. The contest should attract a huge crowd.

Both playing squads will have gone through a strenuous season when Thanksgiving Day arrives. Yet they are willing to forego the relaxation to which they have been looking forward and to engage in another week of strenuous training to be primed for a first-class football game. The least that the public can do is to buy many thousands of tickets.

If earnest thinking will help to end the depression the restoration of the soft coal industry to health must have been expedited by the international conference on bituminous coal held in Pittsburgh this week under the auspices of the Carnegie Institute of Technology. It is to be hoped that every coal man who failed to attend will read the stenographic report of the proceedings.

*The mercury in Pittsburgh thermometers yester-*day established a new high record for November 20. To people dressed for winter weather it was unpleasantly warm. The high temperatures of the week may be counted as a blessing, however, when consideration is given to the many families unable to pay for gas or coal.

Low commodity prices, like the high temperature, are making a good many people uncomfortable. But they, too, are a blessing for the poor. As for the well to do, they have every inducement, in the cheapness of things, to make their Christmas giving extensive. By the way, Christmas is only a little more than a month distant, and forehanded folks will begin their holiday shopping now.

The arrival of the first carload of Thanksgiving turkeys is a reminder, too, to prepare for another great festival. Don't be cynical and say there is little for which to be thankful. After all, the destitute compose only a small fraction of the population. Most of us have a multitude of reasons to be grateful. Radiate cheerfulness: it is good medicine.

There is nothing gloomy in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph to be published tomorrow. Brightness and color predominate. Some more of the paintings in the Carnegie Institute's international exhibition—the "Indian Pony Race," and "Circus Girl," and "Susanna"—are reproduced in full color, and there is a whole page of photographs of smiling babies.

*The big comic section in the Sunday Sun-Tele-*graph will have a new feature—colored comic stamps for girls and boys to cut out. Start a collection of them for the youngsters. The March of Events Section will have important articles by Ray Stannard Baker, Paul Painleve, former premier of France; Congressman James M. Beck, Guglielmo Ferrero, the historian, and other noted persons.

'Plant That Kind of a Tree, Sam'

By Nelson Harding

Take a look across the border,
See the neighbor's healthy orchard
With its trees' well laden branches
Bearing sound fruit for its owner.

Uncle Sam might well be guided
By that neighbor's ways and methods
More successful and productive

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Woman's Weakest Moments

A man's weakest moments are his gay moments—a woman's weakest moments are her desperate moments.

* * *

In almost every woman's life there are certain "desperate moments," when she has to watch her step, to keep from skidding into a foolish marriage.

The most dangerous of these is that bitter moment, when a girl realizes that she is not going to get the man she WANTS. That moment when she faces the fact that his selfishness or his ambition or some other woman makes him unattainable, and when she is sorely tempted to marry the first man who comes along, just as a "consolation prize."

* * *

There is that perilous moment when a girl is flirting with 30, and has waited overtime for Prince Charming to come riding by, when she is tired of being a perennial bridesmaid, and foolishly tempted to close her eyes and say "yes" to the faithful old "Spare Tire" who has been patiently begging her to marry him for years.

* * *

And there is that weak moment, after a hard day at the office, when her nerves are stretched to the snapping point, and she feels that she can't stand the manager's picking or the daily grind another instant! You know! That moment when the lure of a home and a delft-blue kitchen and a little spare time to go window-shopping tempts her to sink into the arms of the stodgy, middle-aged Boy Friend with the kind heart and triple chin.

Last but not least, there is that moment, which comes so often at the height of a successful woman's career, when she has a prescient vision of the bleak day, when her friends and her teeth and her illusions will be falling away, and she will find herself lonely in the midst of all her achievements.

* * *

This is the insidious moment, when an otherwise sane woman calls down the laughter of the gods, by eloping with a playboy or walking to the altar with a youth half her age. Or attaching herself to a gigolo, instead of buying a Pekingese.

* * *

It takes about all the LOVE you can feel or hold, in order to weather marriage happily. And, it's not fair to short-change yourself or the other fellow.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Purely personal piffle: The tastiest milk toast in the world is at Shepheard's in Cairo. I can't spell hemorrhage without looking it up in the dictionary. I read programs when stage dancers imitate mechanical dolls. Maurice Chevalier "Mugs" too much on the screen.

No one describes a dramatic scene with the simplicity of Somerset Maugham. I never met a person from Sacramento. Nancy is a favorite feminine name. When I have time I let a barber give me "the works" singe, high frequency currents and all. I am strangely touched by old spinning wheels.

A play I remember more than any other is "Irebound." The best trained chorus was in the totem pole number of "Rose Marie." The book stirring me to the greatest laughter was Jerome K. Jerome's "Three Men in a Boat" more than 20 years ago. I lose a front door key about once a month.

I never wore a Panama hat, ate water cress or saw a hockey match. The song and singer pleasing me most in the past decade are "Gypsy Love Song" by John Steele. Someone stole a caricature of me by Caruso from my home. I think shamefully reckless international banking is the chief cause of our economic distress.

The St. Louis union station interests me more than any other railroad terminal. My deposit box contains the complete affidavit of a person who tried several times to blackmail me. People who keep on applauding at theaters make me furious. Think Ring Lardner is our greatest humorist.

Often I dream of walking up to a skinned beef on a meat hook to discover it a human corpse. I never drink water between meals but often a dozen glasses while eating. I do not know a pronunciation exactly like James R. Quirk's. Fred Allen's voice puts my teeth on edge.

I speak to 100 people around town whom I never met. I was about to win a spelling match and a $10 prize at 18 but fell down on callipygian. The bloodiest prizefight I ever saw was between Ace Hudkins and Sammy Baker in Los Angeles. Eddie Duchin is the best of the cafe pianists now current.

No paragraph of the year amused me so much as: "A stray dog with the name E. G. Caldwell has been about the village for a few days.—Carroll County (N. H.) Independent." The New Yorker commented: "Not old Eddy Caldwell?"

* * *

I have been introduced to Rex Beach half dozen times and he always thinks it our first meeting. Gentlemen and ladies that's IT. I usually quit my typewriter each afternoon at precisely quarter of 5, although I rarely look at the clock. I have no idea what a passive participle or double negative are. A gang of cronies down in Texas nicknamed me "Old Buckskin." My father's favorite expression was "By Golly!" The house where I was born is to become a public library bearing my name.

* * *

I have vowed never to attend another banquet. The most interesting I ever attended was to Irvin Cobb at the old Waldorf. No speech was more than two minutes and every one rang the bell. I never had ambition to do any sort of work save what I have done for 18 years. I'm utterly uncomfortable in a room full of strangers but never have the nerve to sneak out. Ten years ago I gabbed garrulously to a Mr. Hermsworth for five minutes before I realized it was Lord Northcliffe and became completely inarticulate. I have fewer epistolary complaints about the depression from California than any other state.

* * *

Mexico is the most depressing country I ever visited. I've never cared to see a baseball game since the bribery scandals. Beatrice Lillie amused me singing off key and making false stumbles in the first Charlot Revue. I now own 98 pickle forks.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Will it rob little Billie of his self-dependence if you tell him there's a God? Or give him a book of Bible stories?

Will it weaken baby Blossom's future character if you teach her "Now-I-Lay-Me's" at your knee?

Mrs. Catherine Maltby Blaisdell says it will. Mrs. Blaisdell is the wife of Prof. Thomas Charles Blaisdell, Jr., (economics) of Columbia University. Both she and her learned husband think that God's a lot of superstitious poppycock, and no proper subject for discussion in an enlightened American home. Which may or may not be of interest to the unenlightened, superstitious Americans who are paying Prof. Blaisdell to instruct their young. Be that as it may, Mama Blaisdell doesn't want any book containing pictures of praying children in her home. Because it might make her own highly cultured little heathens ask questions, and then what?

It all happened because certain New York book publishers decided to publish a picture book called "PEGGY AND PETER." The book show's a day's doings of two little tads and their pup. There is—or rather there was—a picture of Peggy and Peter saying their prayers. The proofs of the book were shown to a group of women before publication—and immediately a great clamor arose. The praying picture would never, never do! Would the publishers please take it out? They would. They did. But Why? Enter Mrs. Blaisdell—

"If such a picture were put into the hands of my children," said she, "I should be in for a bad half hour trying to explain what prayers were, and why they did not form a part of their routine. I would not bar the book from the house to save myself this trouble, but I think it is vastly improved by the omission of such a picture, for a great many children today are brought up without ever hearing of God or religion. Mine are among them.

"To introduce a small child to the idea of an omnipotent Father may easily rob him of his self-dependence. He may form the habit of leaning on some person or power instead of growing up in the belief that he alone must meet and solve his problems as they arise. One might jeopardize the whole future happiness of a child by telling him that he is accountable to God for what he does and not to his own conscience."

In other words—NIX ON GOD.

Don't let the Little Tike think that there's a mysterious source of comfort and wisdom and strength—

Tell him that he can and must depend on himself—that he has everything within him which he will need to understand and beat this difficult game of human existance—

An interesting theory. But suppose some day Mama Blaisdell neglects to bar the exclusive Blaisdell door against Reality and the little Blaisdells tumble out of that door, off the University campus, into the vast, disorderly, tragic and heart-breakingly beautiful business of Life-as-Is—then what?

Suppose the little Blaisdells happen upon Love? Or Fear? Or Shame? Or Hate? Or Poverty? Or Beauty? Or Birth? Or Death? Or those strange, dark urges . . . those tall, shining flights of the human soul which have no name—what then? Can they "depend upon themselves" to answer those questions which the wisest men have been unable to answer for 50,000,000 years? Can they depend upon their little pinch of Blaisdell protoplasm to stand up against the wonders and mysteries and terrors of Reality?

Or will they be forced to see that there is more behind a human soul than a couple of smart parents and a campus . . . and will they go stumbling forward into the darkness, reaching for a Hand that will steady them through their humiliation, comfort them in their agony, guide them through their darkness?

And will they then be grateful to the mother who told them that Fate could be fought with formulas? Or will they pity her?

Sales Tax Fills a Need

By Merryle S. Rukeyser

After conferring with the Secretary of the Treasury on taxation matters, Senator Smoot, of Utah, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, long a believer in the sales tax principle, advocated a selective sales tax as a supplement to the existing federal scheme of taxation.

In respect to the sales tax, it was assumed in Washington that Mr. Smoot was echoing Secretary Mellon's views, although in suggesting the doubling of surtax rates on incomes in excess of $100,000 the Senator was going counter to the opinion of the Treasury head.

TAXATION is at best a necessary evil, but in time of subnormal business activity and restricted employment opportunities, it behooves Congress to adopt a tax system which will be as little disturbing as possible to constructive business.

The sales tax principle admirably meets that requirement, whereas punitive rates on income and corporate profits taxes serve only to discourage creative business expansion and to encourage wealth to hide in tax free channels.

The huge federal deficit, which administration leaders contend calls for added revenues, inevitably drives lawmakers to the sales tax, which alone gives promise of becoming immediately productive. On the other hand, taxes based on profits depend on unpredictable factors, and make for uncertainty and doubt.

IN enumerating to 64 American Representatives and Senators, who are observing the practical operation of the sales tax in Canada as the guests of William Randolph Hearst, the advantages which attracted the Dominion to this tax principle a decade ago, George V. Jones, of the Dominion's Department of Revenue, said:

"Sales are going on constantly—in good times and in bad times. People need goods and no matter how much buying power diminishes, there is always some selling going on and there is always a basis of taxation.

". . . Statistics show the sales tax has been a very large revenue producer. At one time it represented about 24 per cent of the total revenue of the country. That was when it was not 1 per cent, but 1½ per cent.

"So that from the standpoint of revenue its operation has been eminently satisfactory.

". . . It is reasonable to assume that at no time has the cost exceeded 5 per cent of the amount collected."

THE Canadian sales tax was modeled after the Philippine tax, which had been in successful operation 16 years earlier. The French sales tax is broader, and is levied not only on sales, but on commissions, fees, interest, and many other commercial payments. Australia turned to the sales tax last year.

In dealing with the deficit, Congress should seek to augment revenues in a manner which will not retard impulses making for a restoration of normal business conditions.

Modern economists recognize the obligation of governments to act as economic stabilizers, and believe that they should pay off debts in time of prosperity and inflation and incur debts for constructive improvements in time of depression.

On the revenue-producing side, the sales tax offers a controllable source of income, whereas other means of getting revenue are highly uncertain, variable and speculative under existing business conditions.

MAN'S SUPERIORITY

By Archibald Henderson

There is an abiding satisfaction in the effort to discover truth. There is something pure, austere and beautiful about truth which makes it alluring and worthy of pursuit. There is a famous Latin proverb, "Magna est veritas, et praevalebit"—which is, translated: Great is truth, and it shall prevail.

In I. Esdras, iv, 38, 40 41, are found words of like content: "Truth abideth, and is strong forever, she liveth and conquereth for evermore—Blessed be the God of truth—And all the people then shouted and said, 'Great is truth and strong above all things'."

It is not improbable that an antiseptic quality of Goethe's art, which preserves his work against the ravages of time, was his profound passion for, his loyal allegiance to, the truth. "Nature," Goethe once remarked to a friend, "knows no trifling; she is always sincere, always serious, always stern; she is always in the right, and the errors and mistakes are invariably ours."

The problem of the scientist is difficult and complex; to keep his mind free from superstitution, favoritism, prejudice. There must be no private loyalty to any special interest; the one loyalty to be cherished is the loyalty to truth. The charm of speculation, the temptation to gain, must be put behind one, as if they were snares of the Evil One. The reason must be kept free of ensnaring influences, of personal predilections.

Nature must be approached in this spirit, if we are to accomplish valuable results in science. As Brown puts it: "You come to the chest of knowledge. It is shut, it is bolted, but—you have the key; put it in steadily and home. But what is the key? It is the love of truth; neither more or less; no other key opens it; no false one, however cunning, can pick that lock; no assault of hammer, however stout, can force it open; but with its own key, a little child may open it; often does open it."

The development of civilization represents, from one aspect, man's increased control over nature. Although many animals in size and strength far surpass man, he is supreme over them all. And this is due, not primarily to his courage, but to his knowledge. It is skill not force, ingenuity not size, which enables man to triumph over the lower animals. Every conquest of science, as Gregory well says in Discovery, brings the human race nearer the day when it will have complete control over the forces of nature and be able to use them for its own purposes.

Each generation of men and women makes its contribution to the accumulated store of knowledge. The succeeding generation will be improved in knowledge, and thereby so much the better able to cope with the difficulties of life.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

By S. H. Connolly

1. "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"
2. "This is the forest primeval."
3. "There's rosemary, that's for remembrance."
5. "O pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth."

6. Casuals of the Sea	Thomas Hardy.
7. Victory	O. Henry.
8. Under the Greenwood Tree	Joseph Conrad.
9. The Moon and Sixpence	William McFee.
10. The Four Million	Somerset Maugham.

11. Brown University is in ————.
12. All accounts of the American Red Cross are audited by ————.
13. The Metropolitan Museum of Art is on ———— avenue, New York.
14. The Philippine Island group belongs to the ———— Archipelago.
15. The "Nutmeg" State is ————.

1. "The Courtship of Miles Standish," Longfellow. 2. "Evangeline," Longfellow. 3. "Hamlet," Shakespeare. 4. "Macbeth," Shakespeare. 5. "Julius Caesar" Shakespeare. 6. McFee. 7. Conrad. 8. Hardy. 9. Maugham. 10. O. Henry. 11. Providence, R. I. 12. The War Department. 13. Fifth. 14. Malay. 15. Connecticut.
